U. S. Charges Gaming Case Witnesses Intimidated

One Spot Grossed $7 Million a Year, Hitz Says; Quash Motion Is Denied

Charges that Government witnesses are being intimidated and that one defendant grossed seven million dollars a year at just one location highlighted a day in court yesterday for 14 men indicted as gamblers.

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz unleashed the charges in District Court at a hearing at which four lawyers for the defendants asked that the Government's bill of particulars be stricken out as too vague. The joint motion was denied.

The attorneys argued that the bill of particulars said the defendants' alleged gambling occurred within an area bounded by Pennsylvania ave. and N sts. and 12th to 14th sts. nw. This they said was so indefinite that the defendants could not be prepared to face trial and have proper defense evidence on hand.

Also Vague on Dates

They also noted that the Government bill of particulars did not give specific dates of the alleged gambling but stated it occurred during a 14-month period.

Hitz then replied that "one Government witness is so afraid of his life that he would not go into this area at high noon—even when accompanied by two Government investigators." He did not name the witness.

Hitz also pointed out that Bernice Franklin, whose tips to the Government paved the way for mass gambling raids March 25 and the indictment of 36 persons April 8, reported at the time she was threatened by one of the alleged gamblers, Atillio F. Acalotti. He was also indicted for intimidation.

The Assistant United States Attorney also observed that another indicted gambler, Bernard Del-Negro, was shot recently outside a Maryland night club.

This shooting occurred near the headquarters of William "Snags" Lewis, another indicted gambler and reputed big-wheel, Hitz said.

"And this headquarters alone does a seven-million-dollar gross business a year," Hitz added. U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay has said that Greater Washington gamoling is a 100-million-dollar-a-year business.

Because of these circumstances and because much government evidence involves information obtained from books and other material taken from the Lewis headquarters, Hitz said, the defendants have adequate information as to the charges against them.

All four attorneys, Charles E.

GREAT YUKON GOLD RUSH!

PROSPECTORS' CAMP—Natives help prospectors set up camp on Discovery Island, near Fishwheel, Alaska, where report of a gold discovery has started a new gold rush. Many Claims Staked But Prospectors Not Sure of Values Yet

Fishwheel, Alaska, Oct. 24 (AP). Prospectors, amateur and professional, continued to pour into this scattered gold mining camp on the banks of the Yukon today in Alaska's 1949 gold rush.

Tents line the river bank for eight miles. The rush began three days ago after disclosure that peasized nuggets were found in a fishwheel by Clifton Carrol when he started to dismantle the device for the winter.

The race to stake claims left little time for the search for gold. That will come later. As a result, no one knows how good Alaska's latest gold strike actually is.

A few report finding "color"—minute flakes of gold without commercial value.

A temporary landing field for light planes set up on a frozen sandbar is doing a rushing business. On one occasion there were eight planes on the ground and five in the air waiting to land. Bush pilots are making several trips daily to the island.

As soon as they finish blazing their markers, claim holders are moving their tents onto their claims. Hence, Alaska's newest town is stretching steadily along the South River shore in a long thin line of canvas shelters. Each man is entitled to two claims of 20 acres each.

Here on the edge of the Arctic Circle are gathered a group of bearded, agile men wearing lumberjack boots, coon skin caps and representing every profession from airplane pilot to tile setter.

Clifton Carrol, whose discovery touched off the melee, summed up the thoughts of many men when he said:

"I don't know how good this is. Nobody does yet. I know we found gold in the fishwheel. I know what

De Orsey Asks Quick Shakeup Of Redskins

Club Attorney Offers To Buy Out Marshall After Eagles Debacle

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The big chiefs of the Washington Redskins yesterday started what may be a clean sweepdown of their tepee as a direct aftermath of the Tribe's humiliating 49-14 defeat by the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday.

So violent were repercussions from the Philadelphia debacle that changes in the local professional team, possibly from the ownership right down the line, appeared in the making.

Most of the changes were expected to develop out of a "showdown" session between President George Marshall and Leo DeOrsey, an attorney for the club and one of the principal stockholders.

DeOrsey Demands Changes

DeOrsey is known to have demanded certain improvements in the Redskins, not next year but immediately. His attitude left Marshall, as majority stockholder, only three alternatives:

(1) To make the sweeping changes insisted on by DeOrsey, perhaps in the complete Redskin coaching and administrative personnel, and continue under the present ownership;

(2) To sell his (Marshall's) share of the Redskins to DeOrsey, in which case the lawyer himself would shake up the club, or

(3) To buy out DeOrsey's share of the team and then make only what changes he (Marshall) thought necessary.

Whelchel Is Shaky

Shakiest of all in the present set-up is Head Coach Billick Whelchel, in his freshman year as a pro coach but protected by a five-year contract, and his assistants. No one would blame them outright for Sunday's miserable showing, or for previous ones, but the general sentiment was that the playing talent on hand wasn't being used effectively.

Into the general hubbub again crept the name of Frank Leahy, Notre Dame coach who turned down the Redskin job last winter before Whelchel was signed. DeOrsey is Leahy's attorney and figures to be able to persuade him to come to Washington if he (DeOrsey) has control of the Redskins.

It is generally believed that one reason why Leahy turned down the Redskin offer last year was his apprehension over "interference" by Marshall with coaching techniques.

Marshall was in a quandary after

Reckord Quits As Legislative Chief of Guard

His Action at Confab Vies With Cramer-Finch Feud, Air Force Fight

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 24—Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, "Mr. National Guard" for the past quarter century, today announced his retirement from the Capitol Hill-Pentagon battlefields.

This disclosure of the veteran Marylander shared attention here at the [illegible] tion of the National Guard Association with the boiling-over Cramer-Finch feud and the running fight between the Guard and the Air Force.

The latter already has flared up with renewed vigor and the top-level row in the Department of Defense National Guard Bureau has built up such pressures that a public blow-off is freely predicted before the meeting ends.

Both Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard Bureau, and Maj. Gen. George C. Finch, head of the Air Force Division of the bureau, are here but avoiding each other. According to friends, neither has spoken since Cramer fired Finch a month ago and then withdrew his order under pressure from above, pending a settlement of the issue.

Largely because of another and higher level defense controversy—aired on Capitol Hill this month—the Cramer-Finch dispute has remained unsettled since first publicly disclosed in The Washington Post several weeks ago.

Cramer, a ground officer, and Finch, his chief air assistant, still are attempting to carry on via written communications and subordinates.

It was widely reported tonight that when the Adjutants General of the States and the District of Columbia meet Tuesday with their Air staffs they will not support Finch.

In a sense, the controversy between Cramer and Finch over who shall run the Air National Guard is but a part of the broader clash

Expenditure Cuts Listed By Attlee

Emergency Plans Designed to Save $784 Million a Year Told in Commons

By Ned Russell

London, Oct. 24 (NYHT).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee announced in the House of Commons today the Labor Government's emergency plans to cut 280 million pounds (784 million dollars) off the government's net annual expenditure.

One of the economy measures provides that a fee of not more than one shilling (14 cents) be charged for each prescription issued under the socialized medical service program. It would not apply to old-age pensioners.

Attlee disclosed the government's program in a 21-minute speech in the Commons, which he followed tonight with a broadcast to the nation, warning that the future of the British welfare state "depends on a new and greater effort by everybody in it."

Although Attlee insisted in his broadcast that the government has tried to be as fair as possible in spreading the burden of the new economies, the program will result in a rise in the cost of living of the nation's wage-earners.

Except for the recently announced increase in profits tax from 25 to 30 percent, relatively little of the new burden will fall on the wealthy classes. This is certain to provoke some harsh criticism from within the Labor Party when the program is debated in the Commons Wednesday and Thursday.

A broad breakdown of the economy plan shows that 140,000,000 pounds ($392,000,000) are being slashed from the government's capital investment program, 110,000,000 pounds ($308,000,000) from current government expenditure and 30,000,000 pounds ($84,000,000) off the cost of defense.

Attlee indicated that this saving on defense was only a preliminary figure. He said a comprehensive review of the armed services is under way to make them as efficient and economical as possible consistent with Britains obligations in the western European union and the Atlantic Pact.

Attlee appealed urgently for increased production even if it means increased working hours in some industries.

National Effort Unequal

"The national effort is unequal," he told his radio audience. "If all did as well as the best, or even as the good, we should be well on the way to getting through our difficulties."

Conservative Leader Winston Churchill indicated that he thought it was both inadequate and too late. This suggested that the Conservatives probably will vote against the motion of confidence which Attlee will demand after the debate.

Attlee listed cuts in the housing program, the national health service, food and agriculture subsidies, education and various administrative costs.

He also confirmed the government's plans to cut the nation's dollar imports 25 per cent—from $1,600,000,000 to $1,200,000,000.

Among the specific economies announced by Attlee were:

Housing—Private building will be further restricted to save 35 million pounds (98 million dollars). An additional 35 million pounds

Truman Again Calls For World Inspection And A-Bomb Control

Human Relations Challenge Of Century, Truman Says

The challenge of the twentieth century is the challenge of human relations, and not of impersonal natural forces. The real dangers confronting us today have their origins in outmoded habits of thought, in the inertia of human nature, and in preoccupation with supposed national interests to the detriment of the common good.

Speech at U. N. Site Bids Russia Take Another Look at American Plan

By Robert Albright
Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 24.—President Truman today, in effect, appealed to Russia to take another look at the American plan for international inspection and control of the atom bomb.

Softly but firmly he urged the American proposals as "a good plan . . . a plan that can work . . . the only plan so far developed that would meet the technical requirements of control."

By implication at least, he said that unless Russia can come up with more effective proposals than it has in the past it should accept the American plan.

It was the President's first major foreign policy pronouncement since Russia succeeded in exploding the atom. He chose this fourth birthday of the United Nations to deliver it.

Speaking at cornerstone-laying ceremonies on the East River site of the new home of the United Nations, Mr. Truman addressed representatives of the 59-nation General Assembly, in their first outdoor meeting.

But at times he seemed to be talking mostly for the benefit of Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet Foreign Minister, seated with other U. N. vice presidents on the speakers' dais.

Never once was Russia formally mentioned in the speech but two U. N. "goals" envisaged by the President as essential to lasting peace have long been stumbling blocks to American-Soviet accord.

They were (1) an international system for control of weapons and (2) respect for human rights, including effective provisions for freedom of information.

"No single nation can always have its own way," Mr. Truman told the General Assembly, "for these are human problems, and the solution of human problems is to be found in negotiation and mutual adjustment."

He told the assembled delegates and 10,000 spectators seated bareheaded beneath the towering U. N. headquarters building, that still another goal is requisite to a peaceful world—an increase in the standard of living of the backward areas of the earth.

He announced that his famed "Point Four," designed to carry American technical assistance and capital investment to these undeveloped areas, will be recommended for a "high priority" at the next session of Congress.

Bidault Works Desperately at Cabinet Task

DeGaulle Tells Rally Leaders to Prepare for His Return to Power

Paris, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Premier-designate Georges Bidault worked desperately today to hammer out agreements on economic policy and cabinet jobs among France's wrangling political parties and end the 19-day government crisis.

But no solution was in sight. There was a growing belief here that the quarreling can be ended only with dissolution of the National Assembly and the scheduling of a general election.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle told local leaders of his Rally of the French People (RPF) at Nantes that "new elections are approaching." He told them to prepare for the elections and his own return to power.

Even the Conservative paper, Le Monde, generally critical of de Gaulle, called for elections. It agreed with the general that the crisis was "tragi-comedy."

Bidault, 50-year-old president of the Catholic Popular Republicans (MRP), is a former Premier, Foreign Minister and resistance hero. He became the third Premier designate within a week last night when he agreed to try to patch together a cabinet. Both Jules Moch, Socialist, and Rene Mayer, Radical Socialist, had failed.

He announced that he will make certain of agreement on wages and prices and cabinet posts before he asks the assembly for a vote of confidence.

Even as he began negotiating, the Socialist Workers Force, France's largest non-Communist union, authorized its executive committee to call a strike unless workers' demands for higher salaries are met.

AEC Termed Too Leisurely, Inefficient

Minority Probe Report Also Finds Handling Of Security 'Loose'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Six Republican members of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee yesterday characterized the Atomic Energy Commission as too "leisurely" and indecisive, and guilty of some inefficiencies and "considerable waste" of money.

They also declared the AEC administered its security "loosely" and in violation of the law.

The findings were made in a minority report on the congressional group's summer-long investigation of charges made against the AEC by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), ranking minority member.

A majority report, made public ten days ago, cleared the AEC of most of the charges and flatly denied that it had committed any violations of the law.

Divided by Party Lines

Supporters of each of the reports were divided by party lines. All Democratic members of the committee, except Senator Tydings (Md.), who did not participate, signed the majority report.

Yesterday's minority document was signed by all Republican members except Senator Vandenberg (Mich.), who was ill during the time the reports were prepared, and Representative Hinshaw (Calif.), who is reportedly planning a separate dissent.

The minority's findings, while sharply critical of the AEC, were phrased in considerably more temperate terms than Hickenlooper's original charges. He had accused AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal with words such as "incredible mismanagement," "equivocation" and "fiascos."

Red Leanings Not Mentioned

Hickenlooper had also declared that the AEC employed "numerous persons . . . who have strong Communist leanings." Yesterday's report made no mention of this. With reference to security, it declared that regulations have been so loosely administered in violation of the law, that "widespread opportunity" had been provided for the infiltration of subversive persons and for the loss of secret information.

The report admitted that the U. S. enjoys atomic weapon superiority by "a wide margin" over any other nation. But, it said, our national security "demands bolder, speedier and more effective development" of the atomic program to maintain and expand that pre-eminence.

On the subject of management, the report found that the AEC had made large delegations of authority to field officers, but failed to

Straying Mantels From White House Turn Up Again

Three White House mantels which went astray back in the 1880s have turned up again.

They were unearthed because a Washington area woman, now in her eighties, remembered a visit she made in 1910 to a home in Southwest Washington.

All are still in good repair. One is now in place in a Washington home.

The story of these mantels, which "saw" the historic Mexican and Civil War periods from the East Room of the White House, is told on Page B-1 of today's issue of The Washington Post.

Free Tests Continue

Diabetes Detection Checks Show High Percentage Here

Last week's diabetes detection drive here revealed a "surprisingly high" percentage of diabetics among those tested. The free testing will be continued another week.

Out of 1063 urinalyses left at District drugstores last week in response to the District Diabetes Association's detection campaign, 36, more than 3 percent, were found to be positive, according to Dr. Lawrence J. Thomas, a member of the drive committee.

Committee members expected that only about 1 percent of the specimens would show traces of sugar, as that is about the national average, Dr. Thomas said. None of the 36 persons whose urinalysis was positive had any previous knowledge of their condition, he noted.

Persons wishing urinalyses may leave a urine specimen, taken after a starchy breakfast, at any of a number of drugstores by 10 a. m., before November 1. Those found to have positive indications are notified to see their physician.

The drugstores where specimens may be left follow:

Streak of Fire Races Across Sky, Canadian Claims

Fort William, Ont., Oct. 24 (AP).—Residents of Hymers, Ont., reported today that they saw a huge "streak of fire" race through the sky. They said it appeared due west of Hymers, performed a loop, then moved south to disappear over the horizon.

Frank Stitch, a Hymers fruit nursery worker, described it as the "strangest sight I ever hope to witness. It was on view from 12 to 15 minutes, long enough to get the kids out of school to have a look at it.

"It was a long streak of fire, how many miles long, I could not estimate. You could see the heat waves coming from it."

Only Changes Are Upward

Farm Price Support Level Increased an Average of 10%

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The new price support law will raise the support level for farm products an average of about 10 percent, according to estimates of Government farm economists.

Virtually the only changes in the support levels will be upward. In some commodities the level will be raised as much as 30 percent.

That means that the support level for most farm commodities in 1950 will be 100 percent of parity when compared with the levels for the same commodities this year. This is accomplished by setting up a double standard of parity.

The new law directs the Secretary of Agriculture to compute price supports under both the 40-year-old present formula, and a modernized formula set up under the new law. The farmer is to be paid on the basis of whichever "parity" is the higher.

The old formula is based upon prices of farm products compared with prices of other products during 1909-14. The new formula would change the base from 1909-14 to a movable average of the most recent 10 years.

The so-called "basic" commodities that must be supported next year at 90 percent of the higher formula, and the parity prices under each formula, are:

Commodity	1909-14 formula.	Modern formula.
Wheat, bushel	$2.14	$1.88
Corn, bushel	1.55	1.47
Cotton, lb.	.3001	.2810
Rice, bu.	1.97	2.27
Peanuts, lb.	1.97	2.27
Tobacco, lb., flue-cured	.463	.495
Burley	.448	.497

Under the law the support prices for tobacco and rice next year will be considerably raised from the levels at present. Others will remain as at present.

The law also raises the price support levels of nearly all the "nonbasics," both those under mandatory supports and those that are to be supported at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Those which the law directs must be supported at 75 to 90 percent of parity next year under the new parity schedule are compared here with the old parity schedule under which they are now supported. In every case, except honey, they show an increase over

Berserk Farmer Shoots 9 Before Killing Himself

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—A berserk farmer who decided to take "a few people with him" shot and wounded nine persons in two bars at a nearby suburban village tonight and then killed himself.

Three of the wounded, all bar partons, were in serious condition.

Police identified the gunman as Joseph H. Runyon, 57, Waterford, Mich., farmer. Before starting his shooting spree he told a bartender: "If a man feels like he is going to die, he might as well take a few people with him."

Runyon fired a shotgun through the window of the Waterford Hotel bar, wounding three. Then he ran to another tavern and fired several blasts through the window, injuring six. He then killed himself.

Citizens Protest Plan

Greenbelt Recants, Calls Off Halloween Glass-Breaking Fete

Gloom as thick as a goblin's mask fell over Greenbelt last night following the City Council's announcement that a planned Halloween orgy of glass breaking and window soaping was off.

For weeks the small fry of the city had been limbering up their throwing arms for a gala window-smashing contest that was to be held Halloween night.

In school, young hopefuls had kept an eye on teacher's profile hoping to duplicate it successfully on a store window that night and thereby win a prize.

Then the blow fell. At a recent council meeting several citizens who shall remain nameless, for humanitarian reasons, protested the Halloween doings as being contrary to the theories of education and good citizenship.

The council reluctantly canceled its plans for a supervised night when young goblins, witches and dragons could blow off steam by throwing stones at panes of glass set in frames, and by soaping merchants' store windows, with storekeepers supplying prizes for the most artistic jobs.

The council stuck to its guns in keeping the night of October 30 as "beggars' night," on the theory that it is simpler to dispose of all the "mendicants" at once rather than having them rapping and tapping on doors all week.

Mother-In-Law Loses Appeal of False Arrest Suit

A $2500 judgment for false arrest and malicious prosecution granted an Alexandria man against his mother-in-law, yesterday was upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

A District Court jury awarded the sum to Louis A. Wells, 49, of 104 Raymond ave., Alexandria, after he had complained that his mother-in-law, Mrs. Nellie Reichard, 1816 Ingleside ter. nw., had him arrested on a drunkenness charge. He was subsequently acquitted of that charge.

In upholding the $2500 judgment, the appellate court said: "Though the evidence is conflicting and by no means conclusive we think it sufficient to support the jury's verdict."

Attorney Emmett Leo Sheehan, counsel for Mrs. Reichart, had argued that the lower court erred in not instructing the jury that "mere information given to police officers by a citizen tending to show that an offense has been committed and some person named by the citizen is suspected, is not sufficient, in itself, to warrant the inference that the informer . . . has participated in an unlawful arrest by the police . . ."

Text of Truman's Speech at U. N. Site

PRESIDENT ROMULO, Mr. Lie, distinguished representatives and fellow guests:

We have come together today to lay the cornerstone of the permanent headquarters of the United Nations. These are the most important buildings in the world, for they are the center of man's hope for peace and a better life. This is the place where the nations of the world will work together to make that hope a reality.

This occasion is a source of special pride to the people of the United States. We are deeply conscious of the honor of having the permanent headquarters of the United Nations in this country. At the same time, we know how important it is that the people of other nations should come to know at first hand the work of this world organization. We consider it appropriate, therefore, that the United Nations should hold meetings from time to time in other countries when that can be done. For the United Nations must draw its inspiration from the people of every land; it must be truly representative of and responsive to the peoples of the world whom it was created to serve.

This ceremony marks a new stage in the growth of the United Nations. It is fitting that it should take place on United Nations Day, the fourth anniversary of the day the Charter entered into effect. During the four years of its existence, this organization has become a powerful force for promoting peace and friendship among the peoples of the world. The construction of this new headquarters is tangible proof of the steadfast faith of the members in the vitality and strength of the organization and of our determination that it shall become more and more effective in the years ahead.

THE CHARTER embodies the hopes and ideals of men everywhere. Hopes and ideals are not static. They are dynamic and they give life and vigor to the United Nations. We look forward to a continuing growth and evolution of the organization to meet the changing needs of the world's peoples. We hope that eventually every nation on earth will be a fully qualified and loyal member.

We who are close to the United Nations sometimes forget that it is more than the procedures, the councils and the debates, through which it operates. We tend to overlook the fact that the organization is the living embodiment of the principles of the Charter—the renunciation of aggression and the joint determination to build a better life.

But if we overlook this fact, we will fail to realize the strength and power of the United Nations. We will fail to understand the true nature of this new force that has been created in the affairs of our time.

The United Nations is essentially an expression of the moral nature of man's aspirations. The Charter clearly shows our determination that international problems must be settled on a basis acceptable to the conscience of mankind.

Because the United Nations is the dynamic expression of what all the peoples of the world desire, because it sets up a standard of right and justice for all nations, it is greater than any of its members. The compact that underlies the United Nations cannot be ignored—and it cannot be infringed or dissolved.

We in the United States, in the course of our own history, have learned what it means to set up an organization to give expression to the common desire for peace and unity. Our Constitution expressed the will of the people that there should be a United States. And through toil and struggle the people made their will prevail.

In the same way, I think, the Charter and the organization served by these buildings express the will of the people of the world that there shall be a United Nations.

This does not mean that all the member countries are of one mind on all issues. The controversies which divide us go very deep. We should understand that these buildings are not a monument to the unanimous agreement of nations on all things. But they signify one new and important fact. They signify that the peoples of the world are of one mind in their determination to solve their common problems by working together.

OUR SUCCESS in the United Nations will be measured not only in terms of our ability to meet and master political controversies. We have learned that political controversies grow out of social and economic problems. If the people of the world are to live together in peace, we must work together to establish the conditions that will provide a firm foundation for peace.

For this reason, our success will also be measured by the extent to which the rights of individual human beings are realized. And it will be measured by the extent of our economic and social progress.

These fundamental facts are recognized both in the language of the Charter and in the activities in which the United Nations has been engaged during the past four years. The Charter plainly makes respect for human rights by nations a matter of international concern. The member nations have learned from bitter experience that regard for human rights is indispensable to economic and social progress. They have learned that disregard of human rights is the beginning of tyranny and, too often, the beginning of war.

For these reasons, the United Nations has devoted much of its time to fostering respect for human rights. The General Assembly has adopted the universal declaration of human rights and the convention on genocide. Other important measures in this field are under study.

I am confident that this great work will go steadily forward. The preparation of a covenant on human rights by the Human Rights Commission is a task with which the United States is deeply concerned. We believe strongly that the attainment of basic civil and political rights for men and women everywhere—without regard to race, language or religion—is essential to the peace we are seeking. We hope that the covenant on human rights will contain effective provisions regarding freedom of information. The minds of men must be free from artificial and arbitrary restraints, in order that they may seek the truth and apply their intelligence to the making of a better world.

Another field in which the United Nations is undertaking to build the foundations of a peaceful world is that of economic development. Today, at least half of mankind lives in dire poverty. Hundreds of millions of men, women and children lack adequate food and shelter. We cannot achieve permanent peace and prosperity in the world until the standard of living in underdeveloped areas is raised.

IT IS for this reason that I have urged the launching of a vigorous and concerted effort to apply modern technology and capital investment to improve the lot of these peoples. These areas need a large expansion of investment and trade. In order for this to take place, they also need the application of scientific knowledge and technical skills to their basic problems—producing more food, improving health and sanitation, making use of their natural resources, and educating their people.

To meet these needs, the United Nations and its agencies are preparing a detailed program for technical assistance to underdeveloped areas.

The Economic and Social Council last summer defined the basic principles which should underlie this program. The General Assembly is now completing and perfecting the initial plans. The fact that the Economic Committee of the Assembly voted unanimously for the resolution on technical assistance shows that this is a common cause which commands united support. Although differences may arise over details of the program, I fervently hope that the members of the United Nations will remain unanimous in their determination to raise the standards of living of the less fortunate members of the human family.

The United States intends to play its full part in this great enterprise. We are already carrying on a number of activities in this field. I shall urge the Congress, when it reconvenes in January, to give high priority to the proposals which will make possible additional technical assistance and capital investment.

I should like to speak of one other problem which is of major concern to the United Nations. That is the control of atomic energy.

Ever since the first atomic weapon was developed, a major objective of United States policy has been a system of international control of atomic energy that would assure effective prohibition of atomic weapons, and at the same time would promote the peaceful use of atomic energy by all nations.

In November, 1945, Prime Minister Attlee of the United Kingdom, Prime Minister King of Canada and I agreed that the problem of international control of atomic energy should be referred to the United Nations. The establishment of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission was one of the first acts of the first session of the General Assembly.

THAT commission worked for three years on the problem. It developed a plan of control which reflected valuable contributions by almost every country represented on the commission. This plan of control was overwhelmingly approved by the General Assembly on November 4, 1948.

This is a good plan. It is a plan that can work and, more important, it is a plan that can be effective in accomplishing its purpose. It is the only plan so far developed that would meet the technical requirements of control, that would make prohibition of atomic weapons effective, and at the same time promote the peaceful development of atomic energy on a cooperative basis.

We support this plan and will continue to support it unless and until a better and more effective plan is put forward. To assure that atomic energy will be devoted to man's welfare and not to his destruction is a continuing challenge to all nations and all peoples. The United States is now, and will remain, ready to do its full share in meeting this challenge.

Respect for human rights, promotion of economic development, and a system for control of weapons are requisites to the kind of world we seek. We cannot solve these problems overnight, but we must keep everlastingly working at them in order to reach our goal.

No single nation can always have its own way, for these are human problems, and the solution of human problems is to be found in negotiation and mutual adjustment.

The challenge of the twentieth century is the challenge of human relations, and not of impersonal natural forces. The real dangers confronting us today have their origins in outmoded habits of thought, in the inertia of human nature, and in preoccupation with supposed national interests to the deteriment of the common good.

As members of the United Nations, we are convinced that patience, the spirit of reasonableness, and hard work will solve the most stubborn political problems. We are convinced that individual rights and social economic progress can be advanced through international cooperation.

Our faith is in the betterment of human relations. Our vision is of a better world in which men and nations can live together, respecting one another's rights and cooperating in building a better life for all. Our efforts are made in the belief that men and nations can cooperate, that there are no international problems which men of good will cannot solve or adjust.

Mr. President, Dr. Lie, the laying of this cornerstone is an act of faith—our unshakable faith that the United Nations will succeed in accomplishing the great tasks for which it was created.

But "faith without works is dead." We must make our devotion to the ideals of the Charter as strong as the steel in this building. We must pursue the objectives of the Charter with resolution as firm as the rock on which this building rests. We must conduct our affairs four-square with the Charter, in terms as true as this cornerstone.

If we do these things, the United Nations will endure and will bring the blessings of peace and well-being to mankind.

State Acheson and a small group of congressional leaders in the foreign affairs field, Mr. Truman arrived in New York by train at 11:45 a. m.

He was met at the station by U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie, and Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, president of the General Assembly. They motored with him to the flag-bedecked site of the 39-story U. N. headquarters building through crowds vaguely reminiscent of some that greeted him here in the 1948 campaign.

At the six-square U. N. site, Mr. Truman mounted a tiered speakers' platform. The backdrop was a huge blue-and-white U. N. flag, flanked on both sides by tall standards bearing the emblems of member nations.

Shortly after his arrival, Mr. Truman and Vishinsky exchanged a long handshake. The two stood chatting together for about a minute. Then the President took a seat reserved for him beside Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, his rival for the Presidency less than a year ago.

Mr. Truman and Governor Dewey laughed and talked during the preliminaries and then Dewey delivered a warm welcoming speech.

"If tasks of this kind were his (Truman's) only duties I might even envy him his job," said Dewey. "But, in truth, his responsibilities are such that no one should envy him and all should wish him very well indeed."

Speeches by Romulo, Ambassador Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate to the United Nations, and Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York all echoed the 4-year-old hope that nations can reconcile their differing views within the United Nations framework.

As President Truman concluded, Lie placed a copy of the U. N. Charter in the cornerstone, with a copy of the declaration of human rights adopted last year.

"The United Nations has not yet succeeded, nor has it failed," Lie said. "It is an unfinished structure."

Mr. Truman waited until the three-and-three-quarter ton granite cornerstone was hoisted into place before motoring to historic Gracie Mansion where Mayor O'Dwyer entertained official U. N. guests at luncheon.

Vishinsky Calls on Him

Before the luncheon, Mr. Truman received a number of the guests in an upstairs room. Vishinsky had another "five or six minute" chat with the President but White House Secretary Charles Ross described it as "purely social."

The strictly bipartisan nature of the affair was again underlined by the presence of Governor Dewey and the two opposing candidates in New York's red-hot senatorial race, former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Senator John Foster Dulles, former member of the American delegation to the United Nations. All three talked briefly with Mr. Truman in the President's chatty prelunch conference.

On arrival at the Mansion, Mayor O'Dwyer, assisted by Grover Whalen, really put on a show for the President. A battery from the First Army fired a 21-gun salute. Police boats whistled from the river, and fireboats, their hoses spouting, produced a synthetic rainbow.

On his cornerstone-laying speech, Mr. Truman posed tasks for United Nations that seemed realistically adapted to what it has grown to be. Gone was the original emphasis on international "force." Mr. Truman spoke of the organization rather as "an expression of the moral nature of man's aspirations."

His voice rose as he traced the history of the American plan for international control of atomic energy, through it's overwhelming approval by the United Nations General Assembly a year ago.

The ultimate success of U. N., Mr. Truman told the delegates, will be measured by world progress in human rights and by the extent of our economic and social progress.

He said U. N. member nations have learned from "bitter experience that regard for human rights is indispensable to political, economic and social progress.

"They have learned that disregard of human rights is the beginning of tyranny and, too often, the beginning of war."

He said the United States is deeply concerned with the preparation of a "covenant of human rights" by the U. N.'s Human Rights Commission.

Then he put in a plug for his own "Point Four." He said at least half of mankind today lives in dire poverty—that hundreds of millions lack adequate food, clothing and shelter.

"We cannot achieve permanent peace and prosperity in the world until the standard of living in underdeveloped areas is raised," he said.

In an informal luncheon speech at the Gracie Mansion, Mr. Truman told the guests: "I don't want to see another war—all I am working for is to prevent another war."

He said he is working for the peace security and welfare of all the people in the world "and that's what 'Point Four' means."

Recalling that it took 80 years for the people of the United States "to learn to live together" under the Constitution, he said he is confident the people of the world can learn to do the same under the United Nations Charter.

The tone of East-West, Republican-Democratic amiability that marked the day's proceedings was rounded out at Pennsylvania Station, where Mr. Truman boarded his 4:15 p. m. train back to Washington. Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.), ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, walked arm-in-arm to the train with him.

(The President arrived back in Washington at 7:50 p. m.)

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—It is not obscene to say "West (By God) Virginia."

At least that is what mineral County Circuit Court Judge Ernest A. See ruled today in sustaining a demurrer filed on behalf of Dr. Frank Wagoner. Wagoner was indicted for selling printed matter on which the slogan was printed.

Man, 92, Changes Mind About Dying, Marries

Allegan, Mich., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Le Roy Irwin, 92, who erected his own tombstone last year inscribed, "Born 1856, Died 1950," admitted today he had changed his mind about dying and has married instead.

"I think I'll get him over the 1950 deadline," commented Mrs. Mary Matthews Sage Irwin, 62. She married him secretly last Thursday.

FCC Bars Broadcast Of N. Y. Vote Results

The Federal Communications Commission refused yesterday to let Station WNYC, New York City's municipal station, operate after 10 p. m. (EST) November 8 to announce final results in the special New York election.

The commission said it would have to waive a section of its rules to grant the permission, and that it felt any exception would open the door for "any other number of cases" of special temporary authorizations.

U. N. Charter Shown Here on Birthday

"We, the peoples of the United Nations, determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind . . . do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations."

Yesterday, Washington recalled those words, the opening and closing words of the preamble to the United Nations Charter, on the fourth anniversary of the establishment of the United Nations.

In schools and colleges throughout the area, at the National Archives where the great documents of peace were displayed, and in individual homes where citizens joined in a "light-up for peace" last night, fresh hopes for the age-old dream were revived.

In the exhibition hall at the National Archives, several diplomatic representatives of members of the United Nations attended a reception given by the District Citizens' Committee for United Nations Day.

In a display flanked by an honor guard of Washington Boy Scouts, they saw the official United States' Proclaimed Copy of the United Nations Charter.

Nearby they saw the signatures of V. Molotov, Anthony Eden, Cordell Hull and Foo Ping-sheung on the Declaration of Four Nations of October 3, 1943, the first formal agreement on the necessity of establishing an international organization for the maintenance of peace.

Spread around the circular auditorium were treaties to which the United States has been a party dating back to the Revolutionary War. And in a corner was the newest one, a certified facsimile of the North Atlantic Treaty.

In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the citizens' committee, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Howland H. Sargeant; Arthur Sweeter, United Nations Washington representative, and National Archivist and Mrs. Wayne C. Grover.

The exhibit will be open to the public all week.

At 7:45 p. m. floodlights covered the sky—the Capitol and the Washington Monument were bright with light, and thousands of area homes lit up to exemplify the day's slogan, "We blocked out for war—now let's light up for peace."

In a special assembly, Brother Edmund Clement, FSC, director of St. John's College High School, read students a message from Carlos P. Romulo, president of the United Nations General Assembly.

It read, in part, "One fact cannot be denied. The United Nations has succeeded in building world public opinion, which no power or combination of powers may now ignore with impunity. This is the new force that is keeping the peace, the sentinel that stands guard for the people of undefended areas. Remove this force, this sentinel, and you have a world in chaos."

Four students from different parts of the world addressed the assembly. They were Ismael Gomez Mira, 18, of El Salvador; Werner Rohling, 16, of Germany; Richard Brissette, 14, of Quebec, Canada, and Ricarde Romulo of the Philippine Islands, son of President Romulo.

In another observance, Dr. James Simarian, adviser to the United States representative on the U. N. Commission on Human Rights, spoke on "Legal Problems of the United Nations," at a luncheon of the International Bar Association at the University Club.

RAF Must Sell B-29s To Britons

London, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Royal Air Force will have to sell the British people on the idea before it can accept American B-29 Superforts as military aid, an informed source said today.

"The RAF needs and wants the powerful 'atom bombers' but it wants them with as little fanfare as possible because of the pride of the British people in their own plane builders," said the informant.

A Defense Department spokesman in Washington announced Thursday that consideration was being given to providing B-29's for Britain. The public relations job before the RAF, however, is the big reason for delay in announcing how many of the 1000 B-29's now in "cocoon storage" in the United States will come here under the $1,314,010,000 foreign military aid program. Eventually, Britain is expected to get fewer than 150 of them.

RAF officials said today the American Air Force is sending four-B-29's to Britain to be used in coordinating operational and training techniques with the Royal Air Force. But they declined to confirm that there was any connection between this mission and the Thursday announcement in Washington.

Britain's pride in her aviation accomplishments has been stirred recently by progress in jet transport and fighter planes.

But "few realize here how far we have fallen behind in heavy bombers," an informant said.

Inadequately Advised

Consequently, it was inadequately advised of what was going on, and "this has importantly and adversely affected the security of the program and has produced inefficiencies and considerable waste of public money."

The report added that the commission wanted to exchange atomic information with "certain other nations" and was halted only by congressional protests. It pointed out that one member of the AEC, Lewis L. Strauss, had "strongly opposed the commission's desire to exchange atomic information with other countries."

Those passages presumably referred to exploratory discussions by the AEC, the State Department and the Department of Defense with British and Canadian representatives, looking toward a restoration of the wartime three-power atomic partnership.

Reported Full Agreement

The report's comment suggested the Republican opposed such a partnership, although last week Senator McMahon, chairman of the congressional committee, reported full committee agreement on what had transpired at the discussions, and approval of further talks to come in a couple of weeks.

Although Commissioner Strauss has opposed exchange of information with the British and Canadians, his opposition, it is known, is on legal grounds.

He feels that the existing atomic law prohibits such a sharing of information. But, like the rest of his colleagues on the AEC, he favors review of the law in the light of the Russian atomic explosion to determine whether expanded interchange of data with the British and Canadian scientists would be helpful to national defense.

The legation's lease expired December 15, 1948, and Mrs. Biddle said it had remained in the house despite repeated requests to depart.

Reds Building Jet Bombers, Janes' Reports

London, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Russia is manufacturing two huge four-jet bombers, believed large enough to carry atomic bombs, Jane's All the World's Aircraft reported.

The authoritative reference book also reported that Russia, working with captured German scientists, has developed new rocket missiles for aerial combat, improved rocket projectiles similar to the German V-2 rockets and pilotless aircraft similar to the German V-1 flying bombs.

The Soviets, taking into account the possibility of sometime having to fight a two-front war, have established two separate airforces—one for the Far East and one for the West—equipped with interceptor craft near the speed of sound, Jane's said.

Less Than 500 MPH

In contrast to the American B-47 jet bomber with a speed of more than 600 miles an hour, Jane's rated both the Russian four-jet bomber and the twin-jet Tupolev at speeds of less than 500 miles an hour. That compared with a speed of more than 300 miles an hour listed for the American B-36 atom bomber.

Jane's said the Russians have two fighters capable of doing more than 600 miles an hour, as compared with five American fighters of that speed. The two were said to be the MIG-9 and the YAK-17. A third jet fighter, the YAK-15, was said to have a speed of only about 500 miles an hour.

The authoritative publication said one of the two "atomic bombers" is being produced by units of the Junkers plant, backbone of the wartime German Luftwaffe, which is said to have been virtually reestablished in its entirety in different parts of Russia.

Located in Central Russia

In addition to building two air forces, the publication said, the Soviets have established factories near the vast natural resources of the inner regions. In recent years, most of the expansion has taken place in central Russia and in the east, Jane's said.

"Work is known to be progressing" on air-to-air rocket-propelled missiles, rocket projectiles (including advanced V-2 rocket missiles), pilotless aircraft (German V-1 flying bomb type) and advanced designs in the subsonic category, Jane's reported.

"The most interesting example in the last mentioned class is a swept-back wing single-engine research monoplane based on the German DFS-346," Jane's said. "This is reported to have a speed of 1100 kilometers (683.5 mph.) and may be the type that the Russians, in May, 1947, claimed to have passed the speed of sound. Toward the end of 1948 a Russian science magazine came out with the announcement that a rocket-propelled all-wing research monoplane 'shaped like an arrow head' had flown at speeds far in excess of the speed of sound."

East Europe Envoys From U. S. Confer

London, Oct. 24 (NYHT)—American ambassadors and ministers to seven eastern European countries, including Russia, opened a two-day conference in London today.

It is understood that the altered relationship between Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia and the western powers was discussed at today's meeting.

The diplomats, it was reported tonight, also aired their views on how best to continue the cold war in the Iron Curtain countries. They discussed the effects in eastern Europe of Marshal Tito's break with Moscow and how these effects could most advantageously be exploited.

Those attending the conference include Admiral Alan G. Kirk, Ambassador to Mosco, and Ellis Briggs, the new American Ambassador to Czechoslovakia, who also took part in the Paris sessions of the conference last Friday and Saturday. George W. Perkins, Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs, is presiding at the meetings.

They were joined today by Lewis Douglas, American Ambassador to the court of St. James's. W. Averell Harriman, roving Ambassador for the Economic Cooperation Administrator, arrived tonight from Paris. Both attended the Paris sessions.

George V. Allen, Assistant Secretary of State in charge of public affairs, expected shortly to be named American Ambassador to Yugoslavia, also is attending the London meeting.

Other Ambassadors present are Cavendish W. Cannon, Yugoslavia, who is retiring; Joseph E. Jacobs, Czechoslovakia, who is retiring; Valdemar J. Gallman, Poland, and David K. E. Bruce, France. Ministers present are Nathaniel P. Davis, Hungary; Donald R. Heath, Bulgaria, and Rudolf E. Schoenfeld, Romania.

Puerto Rican Politico To Aid Marcantonio

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Gilberto Concepcion de Gracia, leader of the Independence Party, left for New York today to campaign for Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Labor Party candidate for mayor.

Concepcion de Gracia is scheduled to arrive in New York tomorrow. He plans to remain there until after the November 8 elections.

The Independence leader said today that his decision to take an active part in New York mayoralty fight was inspired by Puerto Rican Gov. Luis Munoz Marin's open support for Democratic Mayor William O'Dwyer.

U. N. Is Urged To Try to Save 8 Guerillas

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky formally proposed today that the United Nations General Assembly demand suspension of death sentences handed out to eight prominent Greek guerillas.

Vishinsky angrily protested to the Assembly's main political committee that the eight condemned guerillas were innocent, that they had been doomed to death merely because they revealed an "orgy of cruelties" inflicted on guerilla prisoners by Athens authorities.

Greek Delegate Panayotis Pipinelis quickly denied Vishinsky's charges, saying the condemned guerillas had been found guilty of sabotage and other crimes connected with their civil warfare against the Greek government.

The exchange took place as the political committee opened discussion of the report by U. N. conciliators on their unsuccessful 18-day negotiations aimed at settling the dispute between Greece and her northern Communist neighbors.

The conciliators, headed by Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo, reported that the private talks broke down chiefly over Albania's demand—refused by Greece—that Athens forever renounce its claim to the southern Epirus region of Albania. But the Romulo group added that the way had been opened to a possible separate settlement between Greece and Yugoslavia.

Vishinsky charged:

"The brutality of the methods used by the Greek authorities to extort the so-called 'confessions' from the accused may be judged by such revolting facts as forcing prisoners to stand for hours naked under the burning sun . . . loaded with sandbags, as hurling them from cliffs into the sea and other inhuman methods."

Czechs to Try U. S. Clerk on Spy Charge

Prague, Czecholslovakia, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—The Czech government plans to try an American Embassy clerk, Samuel Meryn, on charges of espionage, it was disclosed today.

United States Charge d'Affaires James K. Penfield said Czech authorities made the disclosure as they refused a new request that American officials be allowed to visit Meryn.

Meryn, 39, has been held incommunicado since his arrest by Czech security officers last Friday. His present whereabouts are not known.

Four Alleged Czech Spies Given Death Sentences

Prague, Oct. 24 (AP).—A Czechoslovak state court tonight sentenced to death four members of an alleged band of spies and terrorists charged with attempting to assassinate government officials.

Four others were sentenced to life imprisonment and an unstated number to prison terms ranging from 4 to 25 years.

Reliable sources reported 18 Roman Catholic priests each were given two years in prison. They were convicted at a trial in Prague's Pankrac on charges of reading banned pastoral letters received from their bishops.

The alleged spies and terrorists were accused of being in league with the intelligence service of an unnamed foreign power.

The official account said the alleged band had been convicted of one murder, several attempted murders, and various thefts.

Sentenced to death were Josef Horejui, former factory owner; Kamil Novotny, wholesale meat dealer; Bohumil Klempt and Josef Plzak. Plzak was accused of being an "agent of a foreign espionage service."

Britain Plans To Pull Troops Out of Greece

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Great Britain plans an early withdrawal of her troops from Greece as one way of cutting her defense spending, it was learned last night.

The British force, numbering between 3000 and 4000 men, has been guarding the vital port of Salonika since early in the Greek war. In addition, the British have had a military training mission in Greece ever since liberating the country from the Nazis in 1944.

Now that the way against the guerillas is virtually over, as Secretary of State Acheson announced last week, the British see no further need of keeping their troops on Greek soil. They may, however, keep the training mission, which consists of about 100 officers and men.

The United States will raise no objection to the return of the British troops, although in the early days of the Greek war Washington would have opposed the idea strongly.

There were times, notably in 1947, when Salonika might have fallen to a sudden Communist swoop from the north if the British had not been keeping guard there. Officials here believe the mere presence of the British troops had a stabilizing effect.

As another sign of the brightening military picture in Greece, the United States is now discussing with the Greek government a "gradual" reduction of the Greek army by a third or a fourth of its present size.

Secretary Acheson announced last week that the time had come to consider a reduction of Greek military strength, which would bring with it a reduction in the cost of American military aid.

Greek-American discussions on the subject are continuing in Athens in spite of the publicly announced opposition of War Minister Panayotis to any cut in the army's strength of 250,000 men.

According to one report from Athens recently, the United States was urging a cut of 80,000 men. The actual figure involved is somewhat smaller, according to an informed source here, although it would still represent a substantial money saving to the United States.

A potential menace to Greece is still seen in the presence of about 8000 guerillas in Albania. In Greece itself, however, the guerillas are estimated to number no more than 2500, and everywhere in forces smaller than 200 men each.

The long and costly civil war is thus regarded here as ended. The result is felt to be a clear-cut defeat for Soviet power, which had supported and directed the guerrillas, and a triumph for the United States and the United Nations alike.

It has cost almost a billion dollars, but without this American expenditure and effort officials here are certain Communist power would have swept to the Aegean.

At the same time, officials here recognize that the guerillas could not have been checked and defeated without the United Nations. The U. N. repeatedly marshalled the votes of 45 nations in support of the United States, and also stationed an international mission as a watchdog on the Greek border.

will be saved by tightening the general controls on building.

Food—Prices of "less essential" foods such as dried and frozen eggs and raisins will be raised and the price control and subsidy on fish will be taken off next spring to save seven million pounds ($19,600,000). The Food Ministry will cut its administrative costs by 1,700,000 pounds ($4,676,000).

Health—A charge of not more than 1 shilling (14 cents) will be made on each prescription. (This will save approximately 10 million pounds ($28,000,000).

Education—An increase of 1 penny (1 cent) on the charge for school meals and reduced transport facilities for students along with other measures will save five million pounds)($14,000,000).

Agriculture—The subsidy on animal-feeding stuffs now running at 36 million pounds ($100,800,000) a year, will be cut off next February. An additional six million pounds ($16,800,000) will be saved by reducing payments for potato acreage and slowing down the proposed acquisition of farm land.

Government administration — Curtailment of nonessential services and "drastic economies" in other services will save up to 45 million pounds ($126,000,000).

Purse-Snatching Victim Injured

The Washington Post

MISS MARY E. ROWZIE, 210 11th st. sw., shows cuts on her hand and face inflicted by a purse snatcher who threw her to the ground early yesterday and robbed her of her handbag. An hour later, Arthur Vaughn, 32, of no fixed address, was arrested by Park police and identified by Miss Rowzie.

Denfeld Tells Crommelin to Explain Action

By The Associated Press

Naval Capt. John G. Crommelin, who sparked the congressional investigation into the great split in the U. S. defense command, was formally notified yesterday that he had violated "military law" and was given a chance to defend himself.

A letter from Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, offered him an opportunity to submit written explanation of why he released "confidential" naval documents to the press.

Crommelin told reporters he would take advantage of the opportunity, but added:

"I have not decided what I want to say."

His explanation may determine whether or not he gets a court martial.

The 48-year-old officer, who has charged that the Navy's offensive power is being hamstrung under the unified defense setup, was suspended October 6 after he acknowledged he gave out the documents.

The principal paper he released was a letter from Vice Admiral Gerald F. Bogan, commander of the First Task Force in the Pacific, to Secretary of the Navy Matthews. Bogan wrote that Navy morale had fallen "almost to despodency" because of policies adopted by the military hierarchy in the Pentagon, United States defense headquarters.

The release led to hearings by the House Armed Services Committee in which admirals and general swapper bitter recriminations.

A Pentagon informant said Crommelin's explanation of his act would likely determine whether any formal charges will be brought against him.

Much depends, however, on the reaction of President Truman and Secretary of Defense Johnson, although Johnson has said publicly that the matter is up to Secretary of the Navy Matthews. Matthews has directed that "appropriate action" should be taken against Crommelin.

Some Congress members have insisted that there must be no "purge" as an aftermath of the hearings on Capitol Hill, and at least one of the lawmakers, Representative Latham (R., N. Y.), said Congress should not allow Crommelin to be punished for risking his long navy career by speaking out.

Soviet Atomic Gain Doesn't Faze Peurifory

Walterboro, S. C., Oct. 24 (AP).—A top State Department official declared here tonight that "Christianity and Communism cannot exist in the same world."

Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy also declared:

1. The State Department is not "alarmed by the atomic development in Russia" but believes the way to peace lies in maintaining strength in this country and Allied western nations.

2. The United States has the initiative in the cold war with Russia in Europe and "we are constantly pressing it."

3. The leaders of communist Russia as well as their people "are not aware of the true facts" about the United States because Moscow's agents "must report what their rulers want to hear."

Peurifoy, who is in charge of State Department administration, prepared his remarks for a meeting of the Collection County Press Association in his home town.

He declared that "Communism, in essence, is not merely a political or economic theory."

"It is a philosophical system," he said, "with its own concept of the nature of man, his rights and his destiny. . . . It believes that man is weak and unable to govern himself and so muct be controlled by strong masters—that is the police state which employs some of the most ruthless methods of control this world has ever known. As you know, Christianity is not surviving in countries under Communist domination, and I tell you that both Christianity and communism cannot exist in the same world."

Reckord Quits Guard Post

between State Guard leaders and the Department of Air Force over our air reserve forces.

The Air Force wants to "Federalize" the Air Guard—that is take it from control of the State Guard leaders—and run it as a Federal air reserve. Guard leaders like General Reckford and Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, president of the National Guard Association, have been fighting the move.

They charked here today that the Air Force is out to "destroy" the Air National Guard if it cannot Federalize it. Harold C. Stuart, new Assistant Secretary of Air Force, made a brief appearance before the convention today, and facetiously suggested that maybe he should be wearing a steel helmet. He is returning tomorrow and a renewal of the fight is expected.

Over 1500 Guardsmen are here for the convention—breaking all attendance records by far. Included are a large number of blue-clad Air Guard representatives—double the usual number and they may get into the fight. They lean toward antonomy but are generally against Federalization.

Reckord declared today that the Air Force is "attempting to build up a case against the Air Guard for alleged inefficiency to use in Congress." The case will be employed to "destroy the Guard if they fail in Federalizing it," he said, in an interview.

"But the Air Force field inspector reviews an Air Guard unit he necessarily takes into consideration that certain equipment is lacking because the Air Force has failed to supply it," stated Reckord. "Consequently, he gives them a satisfactory rating.

"But the Air Force is revising such reports to show 'unsatisfactory' ratings, because the unit lacks equipment dut to their own fault. I sincerely hope the new Inspector General of the Air Force, Maj. General Robert Olds, will stop this ridiculous effort to discredit us by trumped-up charges".

Both Reckord and Walsh jumped on the Air Force in their annual reports presented this afternoon. The latter declared at a press conference he was willing to "name names" of those "who don't want an Air National Guard." He mentioned Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, and Lieut. Gen. Elwood (Pete) Quesada, formerly in charge of National Guard and Reserve affairs for the Air Force.

Quesada Singled Out

The two top Guardsmen particularly singled out Quesada for attack and Assistant Secretary Stuart made a point of defending him as his "good friend' in his brief remarks today.

Record, in announcing his retirement as chairman of the National Guard Associations legislative committee, made it plain he is continuing as Adjutant General of Maryland, where he holds a life-time job, as president of the Havre de Grace race track.

It's Tops – from the bottom up!

Fact to remember: When you look at a car, any car, you only see about 40% of what you're paying for.

That's why—when experienced buyers come in to look at a Packard—we often invite them to take a "road's-eye view." We like to describe hidden values such as these:

Double-solid-panel body construction—over a frame that looks husky enough to be a battleship's backbone!

Special alloys that make the engine almost "wear-proof." Fact: In high-speed, 25,000-mile endurance runs, Packard cylinder wear is less than the thickness of this newspaper page!

Extra ball and roller bearings—more than you'll find in any other car in Packard's price class. Like the jewels in a fine watch, these costly bearings guard vital parts against wear.

The list goes on and on, and on—and it covers all the big reasons for Packard's superior safety and comfort . . . and Packard's amazingly low operating and upkeep cost.

And how consistent has Packard quality been—in the hidden features, as well as the on-the-surface features? Answer: Of all the Packards built—in the last 50 years—over 50% are still in service!

Exchange Lowers Bond Margins

Reduced margin requirements for carrying bonds of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development were announced yesterday by the New York Stock Exchange.

Minimum margin to be obtained from customers by Exchange members has been lowered to 10 percent of the principal amount of the bonds.

Included As Credit Item

In determining net capital of members under the capital requirements of the Exchange (Rule 415) the entire market value of long positions in such bonds may hereafter be included as a credit item, it has been ruled. Previously the Exchange allowed only 85 percent, the capital requirement being 15 percent, except where written request was made for a preferential allowance when 90 percent and 10 percent usually was allowed.

These changes by the Stock Exchange in margin requirements for carrying International Bank bonds are a result of the enactment by Congress last June of legislation classifying the bonds as exempted securities under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended. The Federal Reserve Board subsequently ruled that International Bank bonds should be classified as exempted securities under section 2 (e) of regulation T.

This placed the World Bank bonds in the same category under this regulation as are United States Government, State and municipal bonds. The Federal Reserve Board ruling cleared the way for the greatly reduced margin requirements just announced by the New York Stock Exchange. Prior to the formal action by the Stock Exchange member firms generally required 50 percent margin from customers.

The margin requirement for municipal and State bonds is 15 percent and for United States Government bonds it is 5 percent, compared with 10 percent on International Bank bonds.

Prime Minister Nehru of India, now in Canada, got cheering news from the World Bank yesterday.

It came in the form of a speech by the bank's president, Eugene R. Black, praising India's financial record, expressing faith in her future, and foreshadowing still further World Bank loans before long.

Black, addressing the New York Savings Banks Association, said the Bank's loans to India were a "risk worth taking." He indicated that the Bank might soon make a 25-million-dollar loan for building a power plant in the Damodar Valley, north of Calcutta, as the first stage of a new Tennessee Valley project in northeast India.

Held Qualified to Borrow

The bank already has loaned India 10 million for weed-eradication and land reclamation in an area as big as Connecticut, and 34 million for locomotives and other improvements on the Indian railways.

But India, said Black, can support a loan service "substantially larger than that demanded by the two loans granted so far." He recalled that India had never defaulted on her prewar debts, had practically paid off her sterling debt during the war and had amassed sterling credits amounting to nearly 600 million pounds.

Of course, he said, there were some unfavorable short-term factors in the Indian picture, among them the currency dispute between India and Pakistan which "could seriously injure the Indian jute-processing industry if allowed to continue."

"But it is inconceivable," Black said, "that two countries, mutually so dependent, could not iron out their differences in the near future."

Praises People of India

Black told the savings bankers he could think of "few more important or challenging tasks for the bank" than of helping the development of India.

"The Indian people," he said, "have inherited a rich civilization; it is no accident that this peace-loving nation produced one of the great spiritual leaders of our time. But they need to develop material wealth. There is modern industry in India, steel works and textile works for example, but their product, though substantial, when spread over 340 million people amounts to very little."

Raising food production was one of the most urgent tasks facing the government of newly independent India, he said. The highest possible industrial output also was needed to pay for imports, especially from the Western Hemisphere, that used to come from the war-ravaged lands of southeast Asia.

Now that two loans have been made, Black said the Bank would send representatives to India from time to time "to see our money in action" and to make sure it was being used for the purposes intended.

Treason Trial Records to Be Played Today

Records allegedly broadcast by Herbert Burgman for transmission from Germany to the United States will be played today at the District Court trial of Burgman on treason charges.

Jurors and court officials will be equipped with earphones for the recordings while a loudspeaker will bring them to the ears of trial spectators.

Burgman, a former clerk in the United States Embassy in Berlin is charged with treason in connection with the broadcasts allegedly made over station D-E-B-U-N-K, Berlin, beginning in 1942.

The prosecution's main witness yesterday was Frank X. Green, a Government engineer, who said the broadcasts were monitered at a Government station in Silver Hill, Md.

He said there were at least 300 broadcasts from D-E-B-U-N-K and that he was thoroughly familiar with the voice of the broadcaster known as "Joe Scanlon" whom the Government has identified as Burgman.

Former Top Hungarian Is Hanged

Budapest, Oct. 24 (AP). — Lieut. Gen. Gyorgi Palffy, formerly Hungary's highest army officer, was hanged today charged with treason in a Titoist plot.

Three other army and police officers also died on the gallows, among them Bela Korondy, a police colonel and former Hungarian army major.

Palffy and Korondy were convicted of treason together with Laszlo Rajk, former Hungarian foreign minister, in Budapest's big trial last month in which eight defendants were accused of plotting with American and Yugoslav agents to assissinate top-flight Hungarian Communists and overthrow the government.

Rajk and two other defendants were hanged Oct. 15.

An official announcement said Deszo Nemeth, army staff colonel and former Hungarian military attache in Moscow, and Otto Horvath, a police colonel, also were hanged today.

Nemeth had testified against the Rajk trial defendants and had been accused by the state as an accomplice of this group. The charge against Horvath was not immediately disclosed.

Man Wins Bride The Hard Way— Milks Lioness

Johannesburg, South Africa, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Daniel C. Esterhuyse, 22, said today he had won the hand of his bride by milking a full-grown lioness.

Esterhuyse, an airway radio officer, said the bride's father had refused to allow the marriage unless Esterhuyse milked a lioness.

'With the help of a couple of natives, I went into a lioness' den and set a trap," he said. "She fell into it, with front paws first. I tied up her back legs and went to work."

He said he got a half pint of milk.

CIO to Set Up Giant Steel Strike Fund

By The Associated Press

Labor's critical issues—the steel and coal strikes—remained unbudged Monday, but there were other developments.

In Cleveland, Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the United Steelworkers Union, said the CIO convention next week "undoubtedly" will act to set up a giant strike fund of all its unions.

Murray told a news conference he thought it would "unquestionably" be unfair if President Truman were to halt the 450,000-man steel strike with a Taft-Hartley law injunction. He said his union had accepted the fact-finding board recommendations and will "absolutely not give in" until employer-paid insurance and pensions are agreed upon.

Electrical Workers Help

Murray found unexpected support among the CIO United Electrical Workers which announced Monday night in New York that it will raise funds among its locals to aid the steel and coal workers.

The UE's general executive board called the steel and coal strikes efforts by management to "destroy unions in the United States." The union did not announce how much it hoped to raise for the strikers.

Meanwhile, one of its big stockholders told off U. S. Steel Corp., demanding a prompt end to the present strike on the CIO's terms.

He is James W. Gerard, one-time Ambassador to Germany, who said in a statement that every U. S. Steel executive is eligible for a pension that would "dwarf completely any average worker's pension . . ."

"Modest Concession"

He said a fact-finders' plan for a 10-cent-an-hour company-financed pension and insurance plan was a "modest concession to labor."

U. S. Steel has agreed to the 10-cent figure, but insisted that the CIO United Steelworkers must contribute part of it.

"I am convinced," Gerard said, "that U. S. Steel's failure to accept the findings of the President's commission and thus avert the present tieup of the steel industry is a disservice to the employes, the shareholders and the country."

Steel industry men said last night they have been informed the Government has suspended strike peace talks in New York with U. S. Steel Corp. officials.

These sources said the peace talks evidently had gotten nowhere and Cyrus S. Ching, Federal Mediation Service director, had decided to call them off for the time being. Ching was reported en route back to Washington.

In the coal strike, hope of settlement was pinned on the unpromising talks between John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and Southern operators at Bluefield, W. Va. Lewis has demanded contract improvements which would increase the cost of coal by 30 to 35 cents a ton.

Railroads to Cut Service

As a result of the coal strike, many railroads either had cut operations of their coal-burning steam locomotives or were preparing to curtail steam passenger services after midnight (Tuesday) in compliance with an Interstate Commerce Commission fuel saving order. The ICC directed roads with 25 days' supply of coal or less to cut their operation of coal-filled passenger trains by 25 percent.

In all, approximately four million persons are out of work as the result of the twin major strikes and other upsets. Nearly one million were idle under UMW and USW orders. The others were mainly those laid off because of shortages of steel or coal.

The 45-day Missouri Pacific Railroad strike ended Monday and the line got ready to swing back into full service. Members of the four operating brotherhoods trooped back to their jobs, with the bulk of the grievances over which they struck settled and others await arbitration.

In Canton, Ohio, the AFL bus drivers' union took its second walkout in two years, leaving 40,000 passengers to shift for themselves. The drivers want a 20-cent hourly boost above their present $1.32 rate. Company officials termed the demand "absurd."

Ship cargoes in Hawaiian ports will begin moving again this week after the 176-day CIO stevedores' strike ends. The dock workers settled for a 14-cent boost of their $1.40 an hour, with another 7-cent raise to come May 1. Settlement was agreed to Sunday in five of the six Pacific ports involved in the strike.

Last-Minute Truce Halts New York Milk Walkout

New York, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—A threatened strike that would have halted milk deliveries to 11 million persons in the New York area was postponed today, an hour and a half after the 4 p. m. strike deadline.

Mediators said union and management spokesmen agreed to stay in continuous negotiation. The truce would not have been called "if the panel was not optimistic," Federal Mediator Walter Margolis said.

There was no announced settlement in the dispute, which carried the threat of a walkout by 15,000 milk deliverymen affecting 210 milk dealers in New York, part of Connecticut and northern New Jersey, Long Island and Westchester County.

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL) had been demanding a $10 wage increase above the current average wage of $76.50 plus employer-financed pension and welfare plans.

Non-Communist

UEW Oaths Go to Dept. Of Justice

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday sent to the Justice Department for investigation the non-Communist oaths filed by officers of the CIO United Electrical Workers Union.

The UE officers submitted the affidavits, disclaiming any Communist affiliation, to the NLRB last week. Such oaths are required from a union's officers before the union can obtain services from the NLRB.

Failure to file the oaths had cost UE heavy membership losses, and the union's officers finally gave in after saying earlier that they would not file them.

Yesterday the NLRB announced that its general counsel, Robert N. Denham, has referred the affidavits of the 13 UE officers to the Justice Department "for whatever action is deemed appropriate."

Among the affidavits are those made by Albert J. Fitzgerald, UE president; Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer, and James J. Matles, organizational director.

Matles and Emspak have been described as Communists in a formal report of the House Committee on un-American Activities.

Denham previously had referred to the Justice Department the non-Communist affidavits submitted to the NLRB by officers of several other unions including those of the CIO United Furniture Workers and CIO Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers.

Murray Determined on Purge of Pro-Reds

Cleveland, Oct. 24 (AP).—CIO President Philip Murray indicated today that he plans to purge the CIO leaders who refuse to go along with general anti-Communist policy.

Murray told a news conference after a preconvention session with his vice presidents that he was standing on the policy declaration his big executive board made last May.

That declaration, adopted by a 33 to 11 vote, called for the resignation of any of its 51 members who did not carry out convention action—including the merger of weak left-wing unions with strong right-wing ones.

The May policy on left-wing unions—reaffirmed by Murray today and submitted to the convention resolutions committee for action—also would require the CIO's 40 unions to oust any representative on the executive board who declined to cooperate.

Murray's decision to stand pat on that policy, and to put the next move up to a resolution committee which he controls, indicated he was determined to fight it out on the convention floor with the pro-Communists and left-wing leaders who have been sharply critical of his leadership and his steel strike.

The one-week annual convention begins here next Monday.

The spearhead in the anti-Murray bloc of 12 left-wing unions is the United Electrical Workers. Its president, Albert J. Fitzgerald, was the only CIO vice president absent from today's opening salvo. Fitzgerald was reported detained in New York.

Murray said the executive board will meet tomorrow, picking the all-important committees for next week's action.

The resolutions committee, Murray told reporters, will also consider the United Electrical Workers' recent ultimatum which called on Murray to fire CIO officers—specifically Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, right-wing former UE president, who persisted in criticizing or helping raid the UE. The UE said it would withhold its dues to the CIO indefinitely unless Murray met those terms.

Arab Nations Eye Integrated Defense

Cairo, Oct. 24 (AP).—A senior Arab statesman said today seven Arab nations are contemplating a mutual defense treaty calling for a unified supreme command and integrated armed forces.

Establishment of common Arab defenses—if the step could be divorced from the Palestine issue—would provide more effective potential allies for the West if a conflict ever materialized with Russia.

An indication of internal opposition to the pact came from Ismail Sidky Pasha, former Egyptian premier and an influential independent political leader. He called such a pact "more dangerous to Egyptian security than the atom bomb." He warned a common command would require disclosure of Egyptian defense secrets.

The high Arab statesman, who asked that his identity be withheld, said it was hoped in addition to a mutual defense treaty an agreement also would be reached on an Arab economic treaty.

Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Hashemite Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Yemen would be the countries concerned. Since all seven nations are strongly anti-Communist, military unification could create a significant new strategic situation among the Soviet Union's southern neighbors.

But another senior Arab statesman said the immediate purpose of the pact would be to strengthen the Arab military position to insure victory if Israel attempts to renew hostilities over unsettled Palestine.

The Arab League Council previously announced approval in principle of an Egyptian suggestion for a collective security system in the Arab world. The informant said military experts would be called in to assist in formulating military plans.

Rep. Irving's Staff Locked Out of Office

By The Associated Press

The staff of Representative Irving (D., Mo.) has been locked out of his office for the past several days, Capitol employes said yesterday.

One of them said the office has been locked since September 20 except when Irving was there and that he has had the only key since last June.

Since then, they said, the staff has entered only when Irving let them in. Members of the staff said they were given no explanation.

Irving has a staff of three: Vernon Moore, secretary, and Ruth I. Timmony and Edith C. Nelson.

Irving's door was tightly locked when a reporter called there yesterday. Associates said they believed the Congressman still was in Washington but he could not be reached at his home.

The House postoffice said that Irving has been picking up his mail there for the last two weeks instead of letting it be delivered to his office.

Irving, president of Hod Carriers Union Local 264 in the Kansas City area, comes from Independence, Mo., President Truman's home town. A suit for an accounting of union funds is pending at Kansas City.

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Edward G. Miller, jr., Assistant U. S. Secretary of State, arrived here by air today to invite Chilean President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla to visit the United States next year.

Miller brought with him a message from President Truman formally inviting Gonzalez to come to the United States early in 1950.

Impulses May Aid Blind

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 24 (AP).—A means of making the blind see, the deaf hear and the paralyzed walk—by sending electrical impulses into the brain or muscles—was seen as a possibility tonight by a scientist in brain research.

He is Dr. Wendell J. S. Krieg, 43, professor of neurology at Northwestern University's Medical School. He said he believes great advances will be made in the next decade in such research on humans.

Under his theory, electrical impulses, duplicating the normal nerve impulses involved in sight and hearing, could be conveyed to the brain by a series of electrodes distributed over the skull.

Since muscles can be made to contract by direct electrical stimulation, "it should be possible to place permanent electrodes at motor points and activate the muscles whenever desired," he said.

Cosmic Dust Still Falling

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—The earth is being showered on a round-the-clock basis by cosmic dust a study of which might determine the makeup of comets, Dr. Fred L. Whipple, Harvard astronomer, reported today at the fall meeting of the National Academy of Sciences.

The particles are about one-six thousandth of an inch in size, and can be seen with the naked eye.

The first detection of the particles, Dr. Whipple said, was made during the great giacobinid meteor shower of 1947—a heavenly phenomenon that millions of Americans saw.

The preliminary studies show, he said, that the particles are magnetic, irregular in shape and are opaque. They have not yet been assayed as to their chemical makeup.

Whipple said there is evidence the particles are falling on the earth day and night.

The academy gave Dr. Whipple the J. Lawrence Smith Medal "in recognition of his acknowledged leadership in the field of motion and nature of meteoric particles in the earth's atmosphere." The award was presented by Dr. L. H. Adams of the Carnegie Institution, Washington.

At Hague Negotiations

Indonesian Political Destiny Obscured by Question Marks

By Dorothy Brandon
(Sixth in a Series)

Batavia (NYHT)—The political destiny of Indonesia and its 76 million people teeters uncertainly on the see-saw negotiations in progress at The Hague.

Communism is but one of the many side issues. But propagandists on both sides are exploiting the red menace freely in their efforts to enlist the support of world opinion.

The Dutch assert that too rapid independence for Indonesia would provide a heaven-sent opportunity for Communist infiltration and eventual victory. They contend that the Indonesians are too weak and too inexperienced to cope with the clever technique of Communist penetration.

Indonesians retort that "it takes a guerilla to fight a guerilla" and that they are better qualified for this role than the Dutch. They point to their ruthless purge of Communist leaders in September, 1948, as evidence of their anti-Communist determination. They warn that if the Dutch don't come to terms and set a date for independence, frustration and bitterness may drive many Indonesians into the Communist camp.

Warning to Dutch

The Republican leader Sukarno told this correspondent, "If freedom is not granted, forces beyond my control may arise to destroy Dutch colonialism. It is a paradox that continued Dutch aggression could well be the promoter of communism."

What is the truth? The United States, through its sympathy for Indonesian nationalism and its pressure for a Dutch-Indonesian settlement, believes apparently that an equitable agreement offers better prospects for holding communism in check than continued discord. This attitude seems to make sense, although it is apparent that no matter what is the outcome of The Hague negotiations, communism will remain a greater or less threat to Indonesian stability.

Sprawling over a land and water area as vast as the United States, the 3000 islands of the Indonesian Archipelago form the strategically vital rim of southeast Asia. Beginning in the west with Sumatra, which is separated from Malaya only by the Straits of Malacca, the islands string across 3400 miles of tropic seas to end in the great land mass of New Guinea. In a northward thrust, the islands of Borneo and Celebes reach almost to the Philippines. To the south, under Timor and New Guinea, lies Australia.

Communist expansion in Asia gives good reason for pondering Indonesia's stability. If communism spreads from China to engulf Indo-Chian, Siam, Burma, Malaya and even the Philippines, will Indonesia be able to resist red encroachment?

Internal strife has beset Indonesi.. since 1946. Immediately after the Japanese surrender, President Sukarno and his Republicans set up their own government in Jogjakarta on Java and defied the Dutch. They asked for immediate and complete self-government.

When the Dutch sought to regain their political and economic hold on the islands through military action, the Republicans fought back. Matters came to a climax when the United Nations Security Council approved a final resolution January 28, 1948, calling upon the Netherlands government and the "Republic of Indonesia" to discontinue military operations and prepare for negotiations of their differences.

After months of bickering, featured by frequent renewal of fighting, the three main parties to the dispute are today seated with United Nations representatives at a conference table at The Hague. The aim of the Dutch, Republicans and Federalist delegates is to achieve a formula for the transfer of Dutch sovereignty to the Republic of United Indonesia. Whatever the outcome, The Hague conference is a notable step forward.

If self-government comes quickly, the new spirit of give and take manifested by the Republicans and Federalists may produce a United Indonesian Army that will command universal respect and confidence.

With freedom, however, great problems will arise. Against a background of illiteracy and fuedalism among more than 90 percent of its people, Indonesia faces a task vastly more difficult than fighting the Dutch.

Indonesians say they wish Dutch assistance, but with reservations. Sukarno said pointedly, "I will not take food from Dutch mouths so long as they give my people a just share. Dutch monopolies are over."

It will not be easy for the Dutch to regard the Indonesians as equal partners. But without such a partnership Indonesia cannot learn to stand alone.

That this needed cooperation may be slow in developing is evidenced by the stiff 14-point economic and monetary plan submitted by the Dutch for negotiation at The Hague. Included is a demand that Indonesia assume all debts and obligations of the Netherlands Indies and agree to contract no foreign loans without Dutch approval. The Dutch also request guarantees for these obligations. They want no change in existing civil law. Foreign exchange, trade agreements and financing would be subject to Dutch concurrence. The Indonesians feel the Dutch are asking too much and giving too little.

If the Dutch refuse to arbitrate, the Indonesians might well walk out of the conference. If this should happen, a disappointed and disillusioned Indonesia might be tempted to seek communism as an alternate way. However, observers at The Hague are giving the talks a better than even chance of success. Whatever the result, the Indonesian drive for "Merderka"—freedom—will be irresistible in the long run.

Plans to Stop Reds Made By Indo-China

Hongkong (Tuesday), Oct. 25 (U.P.).—French Indo-China and Chinese Nationalist leaders have arrived in threatened Kweilin to discuss means of halting the Communist armies at the border of the two countries, the Central News Agency reported today.

The agency did not mention the military situation at Kweilin, capital of Kkangsi Province, but private radio reports said most Nationalist troops had left the city and that it is now "wide open" to attack by approaching Communist armies.

Kweilin is 250 miles northwest of Canton and more than 300 miles from the Indo-China border. Chinese newspapers have reported Communist activity — possibly guerilla—within a few miles of the city but Nationalist sources placed the main Red armies from 70 to 90 miles to the northeast.

Fierce Fighting Reported 200 Mi. From Chungking

Chungking, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Chinese nationalists reported fierce fighting today against Communist attackers in an area 200 to 230 miles east of this refugee capital.

Official accounts said the conflict was around Yungshun, Sangchin and Tayung.

A defense ministry spokesman denied Hongkong reports that the Nationalists had abandoned Kweilin, big South China base 250 miles southeast of Chungking. He said the Reds had not even entered Kwangsi province, of which Kweilin is the seat.

It was officially acknowledged, however, that the provincial government had moved 220 miles southwest to Yungning and that General Pai Chunghsi, Nationalist army commander on that front, had flown to Hainan Island on an inspection trip.

Afghanistan Lost City May Be Key

New York, Oct. 24 (NYHT). — Walter A. Fairservis, director of a three-man expedition of the American Museum of Natural History to Afghanistan, disclosed today that while riding in a jeep across the Dashti-Margo or "Desert of Death" in search of water last August, he discovered the intact "Lost City" of Pershawarun, 30 square miles in area and formerly inhabited by 100,000 people.

This legendary city, believed to have been abandoned at the time of the Crusades, is one of the most important clues uncovered to date in the mystery of the movement of peoples out of central Asia.

"This city has been lost in the mists of antiquity, and a heavy aura of local native superstition hangs over it," Fairservis explained. "Native villagers kept away from it though they have known of its existence for generations."

Climatic Change Blamed

A sudden climatic change 10 to 12 centuries ago is believed to be the explanation why this "imperial city," once garrisoned by the troops of Alexander the Great, was suddenly emptied of its population, who probably moved to India in search of subsistence.

Peshawarun was once situated in a fertile valley on one of the ancient trade routes to India, and then it became a "ghost city" in a desert where the only life now to be found are vipers, Fairservis said.

Unlike most archeological discoveries, Peshawarun is almost completely intact. Part of the outer wall was broken down and some rubble was found inside the city, but the citadel, houses, palaces, aqueducts, fountains and irrigation ditches showed little signs of damage.

Tools of Bronze, Iron

Household articles, bronze and iron tools, bits of clothing and other items found inside the city were evidence that its inhabitants "had a very high cultural level." In the Peshawarun of Alexander's time, the Greek influence was predominant. Then the city became an outpost of Mohammed's crusading armies about 700 A. D., Fairservis stated.

"The real story of central Asia is still a complete blank to us," Fairservis said. "What we can and are going to find out about this city may lead to important discoveries about movement of peoples. We may find that Asiatics also moved from West to East instead of the classic pattern from East to West, and we may find an explanation to origin of the American Indians as a result."

(The United Press reported that a taxicab load of prostitutes en route from Anchorage said they planned to settle at Fishwheel.

(Seven cabs left Anchorage for Fairbanks today carrying gold hunters. One company loaded up two cabs with gambling paraphernalia including a "four-five-six" game, dice, and a roulette outfit.

(Cab drivers boosted the price for a one-way 250-mile trip to Fairbanks from $235 to $450. At Fairbanks the gold hunters hoped to charter planes.

present levels. (The support level for potatoes may remain at the present 60 percent.)

Commodity.	Old formula.	New formula.
Milk (100 lbs.)	$3.87	$4.41
Butterfat, lb.	.639	.704
Wool, lb.	.443	.502

Tung nuts, ton		101.00
Honey, lb., extracted	.174	.170
Comb	.308	.293
Potatoes, bu.	1.77	1.61

Nonbasic Commodities

The law also permits the Secretary of Agriculture to support the prices of a long list of nonbasic commodities which include virtually all farm products. They will be supported however, under the new parity formula, unless they are "competitive" with commodities that are supported under the old parity formula, when they will be granted the same base. The parity prices under the two formulas for most of these products are:

Commodity.	Old Parity.	New formula.
Hogs, 100 lbs.	$17.60	$19.00
Chickens, lb.	.276	.291
Eggs, doz.	.520	.459
Turkeys, lb.	.348	.365
Oats, bu.	.966	.829
Barley	1.50	1.22
Rye	1.74	1.55
Grain sorghums, cwt.	2.93	2.43
Flaxseed, bu.	4.09	4.31
Soybeans	2.32	2.55
Beans, dry, cwt.	8.16	8.49
Peas, dry, cwt.	5.08	5.61
Beef cattle	13.10	17.00

The practical working out of the new law is to raise the price support level an average of about 10 percent. The so-called nonbasic grains, such as oats barley and rye, will get supports under the old parity level because they are competitive with basics.

Toomey Clan Teems With Legal Talent

Listen, don't try any torts or misprisions against the Toomey family of Washington. Man and boy, that outfit has been loaded with law for two generations and reinforcements are coming up fast.

In the Municipal Court Building yesterday morning, three more Toomeys were sworn into the District Bar.

They say it's mostly coincidence, but the fact that all three are sons of Vincent L. Toomey, a lawyer and the son of a lawyer, might just have something to do with it.

The three new legal eaglets are James E. Toomey, 33; John K. Toomey, 30, and T. Murray Toomey, 26. Their father has been a Washington attorney since 1911, a member of the firm of Toomey and Toomey, and a part-time law professor at Catholic University.

The other half of Toomey and Toomey was Uncle James A. Toomey, a Georgetown University law professor, who died in 1942.

There is, alas, one brother who strayed. Vincent L. Toomey, jr., 37, is a real estate man. But sister Catherine is married to Frank X. Brown, a War Assets lawyer, and younger brother, Robert J. Toomey, 21, an undergraduate at Catholic U., seems headed for the law. Especially, says John, "if father has anything to say about it."

John, who lives at 10405 Hebard st., Kensington, and T. Murray, who lives at 2702 Wisconsin ave. nw., both finished up at Catholic U., in the spring of '49, passed the June bar examination and will join their father's firm. Both are war veterans.

James, who lives at 5425 39th st. nw., is Georgetown '41, and a patent lawyer in charge of the Henry Kaiser company's patent department here. He also passed the June '49 bar examination.

Murray, John says, started out in engineering to build a foundation for patent law, but soon sauntered back to the family specialty, general law. John himself "dabbled" in public relations work, "but not for long." All three are married.

Also among 297 lawyers admitted to the District Bar was David C. Acheson, 28-year-old son of Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Young Acheson works in the Office of the General Counsel, Atomic Energy Commission. He was graduated from Yale University in 1942 and from Harvard Law School in 1948. During the war he was a Navy lieutenant on Pacific destroyer escort duty. He is married and has a 2-year-old daughter, Eleanor Dean. They live at 3424 Q st. nw.

Geographer to Talk

Dr. Samuel Van Valkenburg, director of the graduate school of geography, Clark University, Worcester, Mass., will address a meeting at 8:15 p. m., Wednesday of the Middle Atlantic Division, Association of American Geographers. Kaiser-Frazer Gets Another RFC Loan

The Reconstruction Finance Corp. yesterday granted a 10-million-dollar loan to help finance distribution of Kaiser-Frazer automobiles.

The new credit follows by 18 days a $34,400,000 RFC loan to help finance production of new Kaiser-Frazer models which may include a new low-cost car.

Yesterday's RFC announcement disclosed the RFC is asking as collateral a first lien "on all the physical assets of Kaiser-Frazer Corp. and its subsidiaries, including the land, buildings, machinery and equipment known as the Willow Run (Mich.) plant."

"These properties were recently appraised by Coverdale and Colpitts, consulting engineers, New York City, at a recovery value as a going concern of more than 58 million dollars," the RFC said.

There were many more requirements of pledges on the $34,400,000 loan granted October 6 and still others applicable to the new 10-million-dollar credit alone.

The latter grant was in favor of the Kaiser-Frazer Sales Corp., a subsidiary of the auto-producing Kaiser-Frazer Corp.

Court Delays Rulings on Major Cases

The Supreme Court yesterday disposed of a number of minor matters but again delayed rulings on a dozen important cases, apparently because of the illness of one justice and the newness of another.

Justice Douglas is still in a Yakima, Wash., hospital recovering from a horseback riding accident.

Justice Minton, who took his seat October 12, hardly has had time to read up on the acumulation of cases. In addition, Justice Clark is likely to have to take himself out of a number of cases in which he had a hand as Attorney General the past five years. Thus a divided Court might lack a majority in an important case.

The Court recessed until November 7. Still awaiting announcement are rulings in such cases as John L. Lewis' $1,420,000 fine, the injunction in the 1948 railroad strike, the University of Texas' segregated law school, the Baltimore press gag rule, the contempt cases of the Hollywood writers and actors and the Un-American Activities Committee's action against a group which refused to produce its financial records.

Among the rulings was one upholding a lower court award of $15,000 libel damages against the New York Sunday News. The case grew out of a story about Miss Janyce Mattox of Norfolk, Va., in a 1946 newspaper. The paper contended New York libel laws, rather than those of Virginia, should apply, but the courts held otherwise.

New York City's rent control law also was upheld.

Thomas Trial Delay Denied

A request for a new delay in the trial of Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) was denied in District Court yesterday by Judge Alexander Holtzoff who ordered the legislator to Walter Reed Hospital for examination.

Thomas is scheduled to go to trial November 7 on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government through "kickbacks" to him of salary by employes in his office. He is also charged with making false salary vouchers for a congressional employe.

The case has been delayed several times because Thomas suffered gastric hemorrhages and subsequently was operated on for removal of a portion of his stomach.

William H. Collins, his attorney, appeared yesterday with affidavits of two physicians who said Thomas' recovery would be retarded by a trial on the date set.

U. S. Charges Intimidation

Ford, William Collins, Myron G. Ehrlich and Bernard Margolius, denied that their clients knew anything about threats to Government witnesses. (Acalotti was not one of the 14 involved in yesterday's hearing.)

Ford said that since the question of intimidation had been raised by the Government he would like to apprise the court that he had begun a slander suit against Downey Rice, one of the Government investigators.

Ford claimed that Rice, while questioning a woman client of Ford's in connection with the gambling raids, said that Ford would "sell her down the river" to protect "Snags" Lewis. Ford said he was not even the lawyer for Lewis.

Judge David A. Pine said the Government's bill of particulars did not violate the earlier court order that the Government prepare same. He said it complied with the requirements that the defendants be informed with "reasonably certainty" as to the nature of the offense charged, and that no statutory requirements were violated and no constitutional rights were denied.

Fight Government Slavery, Eisenhower Says

New York, Oct. 24 (U.P.)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower warned tonight that the American dream will turn into "the American nightmare" if the people of this country become slaves of the Government.

The Columbia University president, in a speech prepared for delivery before the eighteenth annual forum of the New York Herald Tribune, urged that each new Government proposal be scrutinized for its effect on personal freedom.

"Unless we understand the American dream, it may become the American nightmare," Eisenhower said. "We believe in human dignity, in human rights not subject to arbitrary curtailment. We believe that these rights can be fully possessed and effectively exercised only so long as man asserts and maintains himself the master, not the serf of institutions he creates."

If human rights and freedoms are to flourish, he said, Government must operate "with its powers sharply defined and limited by the governed." He urged citizens to view critically "every slightest reason or excuse for moving the line that separates governmental from individual responsibility."

"If today, we never give up the efforts to determine—so far as each of us can—the probable effect of every new governmental proposal upon our personal freedom, we will be discharging one of our most acute responsibilities as American citizens," he said.

Eisenhower delivered the keynote speech opening the three-day forum. The 10 other speakers at the forum were Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.; Senator Frank P. Graham (D., N. C.); Senator Hubert D. Humphrey, jr. (D., Minn.); Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois, former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), Representative Clifford P. Case (R., N. J.); James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, and Lindsay Rogers, Burgess professor of public law at Columbia University.

Eisenhower suggested that a convocation be called of leaders from every field to determine how social and economic welfare can be promoted without jeopardizing individual freedom and right.

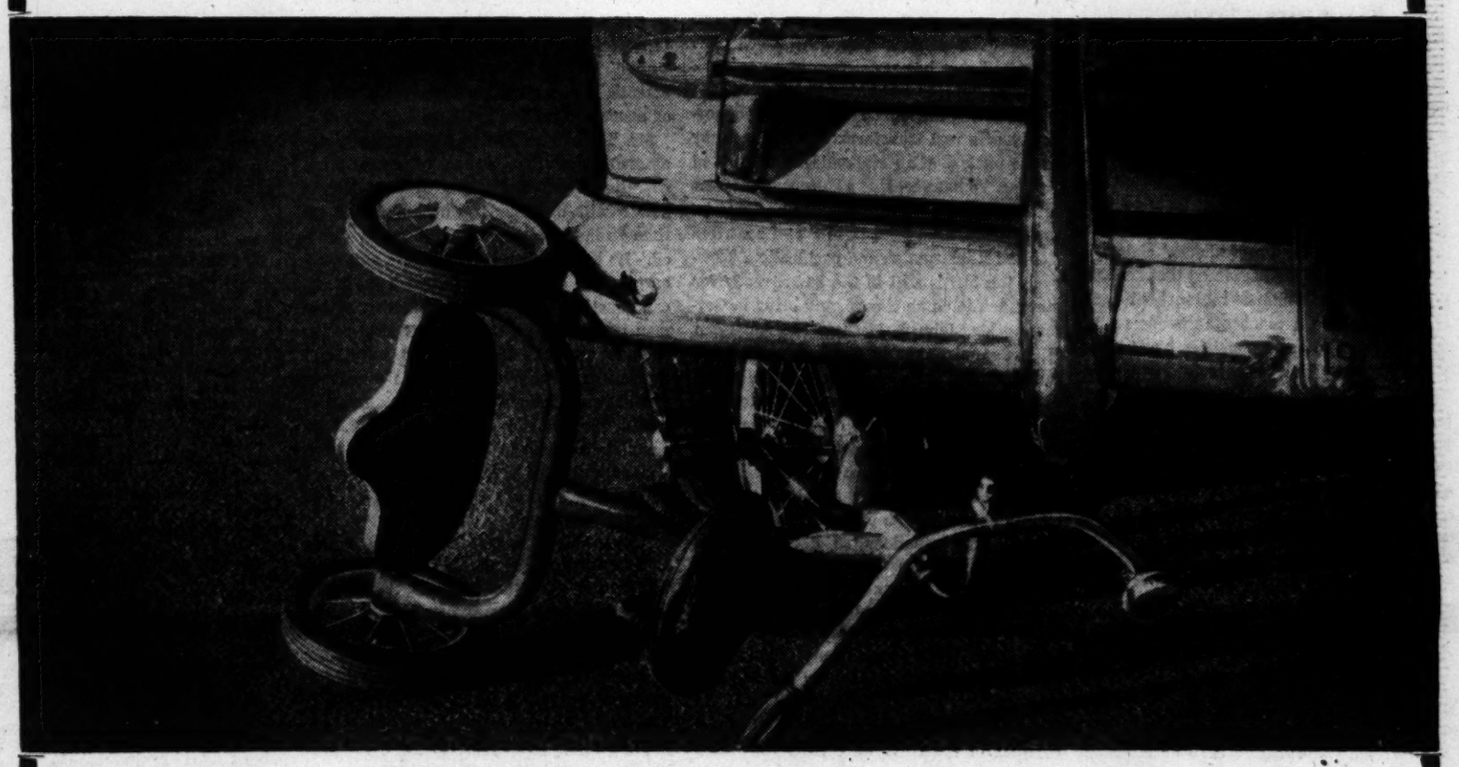
Your Child . . . and My Child



EVEN in the days when man's foremost transportation was the surrey with the fringe on top, he used to enjoy touching mugs with his friends.

Occasionally, he touched mugs too many times. When he did this he wasn't very smart—but he was very lucky, because he rode on wheels that didn't roll very fast, pulled by a horse with a mind of its own.

But then he advanced to the automobile... which wasn't equipped with Dobbin's brain. As a result, the once harmless fellow who took "one for the road" now presses the starter of his car and becomes a potential killer.

The bumper and the bottle are more deadly than the Bomb. The very stimulation that may make a moment memorable can spell tragedy when wheels are added. That tragedy may involve your child—or mine.

But here is the most tragic part of all: At this moment such a man may be reading this message...and he thinks we're talking about "the other fellow." Well, we don't know—perhaps we are. It depends on how he answers when someone asks him: "How about one for the road?"

We do know this: If his answer is "yes," we hope the bottle didn't come from Plain Old Pearson's. We're in love with life. We're in business to help you enjoy it—not destroy it. We believe that "one for the road" is always one too many.

Futile Strike

The operating employes of the Missouri Pacific Railroad went on strike September 9 to force a settlement of their dispute by means other than arbitration. The management was willing to arbitrate and was said to have offered seven times to submit its differences with the four operating brotherhoods over working rules to the decision of impartial arbitrators. The union refused. After the strike began the management offered to let the issues be settled by any of the five ways specified in the Railway Labor Act. Previously the company had accepted the findings of the President's fact-finding board, but the union insisted throughout that its claims were not arbitrable. After 44 days of idleness for their members, however, the unions finally agreed to submit to arbitration the 63 claims (out of an original 252) that remained unsettled.

It is impossible to see any logic in this course of events. Because of the complicated nature of the brotherhoods' claims it was obvious from the beginning that arbitration was the best and most reasonable means of settlement. Do the brotherhoods really have to penalize their members by 44 days of idleness and heavy losses in pay before they can get themselves into a frame of mind to be reasonable? This is a flagrant case of powerful unions flouting the interests of the public and their own members in a futile effort to avoid the inevitable. Unions certainly ought to realize that if they are going to win or hold public support for their efforts to improve working conditions they will have to show more statesmanship than can be found in this case.

Attlee's Kampf

The second step in the grim business of putting the financial house of Britain in order has now been announced by Prime Minister Attlee. Inflation is to be attacked by reducing government expenses. The Labor government will use the ax all along the line, the sum total being about 8 percent of the budget, an amount which, it is hoped, will achieve the "disinflation" necessary to keep the general price level from going up in sympathy with the 30 percent devaluation. Disinflation is necessary to make devaluation work, i. e., to keep the cheapened export goods cheap.

If this had been done before, maybe devaluation would not have been necessary. With the price level constantly outpacing the price level in America, Britain was being put in an increasingly noncompetitive position in the dollar world, a position which it decided to offset by devaluing the pound. There is a reminder of the history of these events in an article by Prof. Lionel Robbins in the current issue of the bank letter of the British Lloyds Bank. Mr. Robbins is evidently replying to critics of America for any part that she played in helping the British face realities. He writes that "to make the United States mainly responsible for what has happened, in spite of the rise in the American price level, the considerable reductions in the American tariff, and the pouring out of dollars in the shape of loans and subsidies on a scale without precedent in time of peace is a very shabby falsification of history."

The reminder is in order now that the British have been asked to cut their suit in a nearer relation to their cloth. Since 1945 the Labor government has been engaged in a vast leveling operation. It has given the workers more and more emoluments, including free medical services, which have cost more than could be raised even by the most rigorous tax system in the entire world. The free medical service, for instance, has been far more expensive than was anticipated. The British rushed to the doctors with any kind of an ache, and even the Health Minister, Mr. Aneurin Bevan, recently admitted that the cost was getting out of hand. Now there will be a prescription fee—a small amount, it is true, but sufficient perhaps to thin out the waiting rooms of the nation's physicians. In addition, a brake is to be put on public improvements, which have diverted resources and energies needed in the export industries.

However, the remedy for Britain's crisis is only partly met by an over-all budgetary slash. Some adjustment one of these days will have to be made in the war debt owed to members of the sterling area, notably India. This debt is in the form of sterling balances held in London, withdrawable on periodical short-term release agreements. Such arrangements are loose enough to allow the creditors to demand and get substantial repayments at awkward moments. For instance, Britain was called upon to liquidate a lot of this debt when the American recession began to hurt the creditors, so that the British themselves were doubly affected by reduced American buying abroad. What is needed, of course, is a funding of the debt which would spread repayments over a long period of years. The United States is interested in such a consolidation, if not a composition, of that debt as a contribution to world financial stability, but Mr. Nehru, speaking for the most pressing creditor, does not yet seem willing, though the adjustment may be pressed now that the British are putting their budget in order—an act which, for its political courage as well as its economic common sense, reflects great credit on Mr. Attlee and his colleagues.

East And West

The cease-fire in Greece must be chalked up as a plus sign for the Western position. A success was badly needed. In Asia and in Europe events are making some onlookers regard 1949 as another 1931, i. e., annus diabolis. As to Asia, much history in China is about to be written. About the new Communist regime in Peking, little is known, except that it is pathologically anti-Western. The gaps in our knowledge need to be repaired, so that wisdom may inform relations, and this will never be done till there is some kind of recognition based on agreed upon obligations. Europe is becoming almost as unknown as Asia. In Berlin there are few references any longer to that city as the outpost of the West, despite the success of the now-forgotten airlift. The old German capital has become the organized headquarters of a Russo-German government which has been prettied up to look independent and to shame the Bonn government into looking the opposite. These events have come hard on the heels of the Russian explosion of the A-bomb—the event which marked the end of the American monopoly, which Mr. Churchill says has saved Europe since 1945.

In Europe it is beginning to look as if the bus has been missed. There was the opportunity of a real transformation of the Ruhr as the nucleus of an economically integrated Europe. To have created a European interest in the whole of the Ruhr—not just the German part—would have been a real contribution to reconstruction and pacification. However, the bus is still in the Ruhr, ready for statesmen to climb aboard, and bring in Germans. Mr. John J. McCloy, the American High Commissioner in Germany, is resuscitating a plan for a real internationalization of the Ruhr. It should have first attention. For the only way to counter the new situation in eastern Germany is to give western Germany a real partnership in Europe. It would be the height of folly merely to give way to west German pressure against such sanctions as dismantlement. Yet this is what in time the allies, in the absence of a European project, will be forced to do, so repeating the same experience which occurred after the First World War, when the concessions denied to Bruning were merely taken by Hitler. Dismantlement, for instance, is a problem which could be transformed if the industrial complex of the Ruhr were truly Europeanized. More and more will a narrow selfishness have to be foresworn and calculated risks taken if this history is not to be repeated.

Thus the deterioration merely sharpens the challenge. In eastern Asia the dead policy of fighting rearguard actions in behalf of hopeless causes awaits burial, a peace treaty with Japan must be quickened, and our influence increased wherever any hope of stability remains. A foreign minister in days gone by once said that nothing is worse in diplomacy than to cling to the carcass of a dead policy. But new policies require revised attitudes, and here a change is needed in the identification of the enemy in this cold war. Surely the enemy is Russian imperialism. Communism has as many colors as a chameleon (or a European Socialist), with varieties—or perhaps potentialities—differing according to locale and management. Only by being less inflexible than has been the case hitherto can the Allies hope to drive a wedge between the Cossack and the Communist parties outside Russia. This does not mean such an expediency as will put principle into the discard, but it does mean an attention to the realities of these rushing times.

Appeal To The Court

The General Assembly of the United Nations has appealed to the International Court for an advisory opinion about whether the suppressions of human rights in the satellite countries of Europe constitute a violation of the peace treaties concluded by those countries. The decision to appeal was taken of course over the objection of the whole Soviet bloc, and after the Ukrainian delegate, Mr. Manuilski, had raised the usual cloud of obfuscation by allegations and charges concerning the suppression of human rights by the United States and Great Britain. Among the cases in which human rights are said to have been ignored in violation of the peace treaties are those of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, Prince Primate of Hungary, and of the Protestant clergymen, who were recently tried and convicted in Bulgaria of offenses against the Communist state.

Among other things the court is asked to decide whether the governments of those countries are required to collaborate in the investigation of charges that the treaty clauses insuring the maintenance of human rights have been violated. Up till now the three satellite governments have refused to designate any representatives to the investigating commissions. The Assembly, therefore, wishes also to know whether an investigation can be legally conducted by commissions comprised only of the representatives of Western powers and of a neutral member appointed by the Secretary General, and whether the findings of such a commission would be binding upon all parties to the treaties.

Evidently it rests with the court to decide whether or not to grant the request for an opinion and thus to define its own area of judicial survey. Article 68 of the Charter of the United Nations stipulates that the court may give advisory opinions "to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable." The Assembly, however, has indicated that even if the court decides that the instances upon which the appeal has been based are considered "inapplicable" by the court, it does not intend to let the matter drop. The charges concerning the violation of human rights have been continued on the agenda for next year.

Even if the court should decide that alleged violations of human rights are matters that may be properly investigated under the mechanism of the United Nations, however, it can hardly make very much difference to those persons or classes who may be slated for extermination in the satellite countries. The effect of its opinion will be an entirely moral one, and will be felt only in those countries where public opinion, as we understand the term, is permitted to exist. Thus, apart from the legal technicalities, the resolution of the General Assembly is, in effect, and to use the Jeffersonian phrase, an appeal to the conscience of "a candid world."

U. N.'s Cornerstone

In laying the cornerstone of the United Nations' new headquarters in New York yesterday, President Truman tacitly acknowledged that the world peace organization has evolved into something different from what its founders foresaw at San Francisco four years ago. The emphasis four years ago was on the power lodged in the Security Council to keep the peace. Yesterday the emphasis was on the power of the General Assembly to reflect the conscience of mankind. "The United Nations," the President said, "is essentially an expression of the moral nature of man's aspirations."

Mr. Truman reiterated his frequently expressed hope that means of establishing effective international control over atomic power will be found. But he wasted no time on the impotence of the Security Council. He merely took it for granted and went on to speak of the fields in which the U. N. can function, such as the promotion of human rights, the granting of technical assistance to economically backward areas, and continuous strengthening of the standards of right and justice for all nations. In other words, the police function of the U. N. is completely overshadowed today by its function as a sort of referee among the great powers and a leaven in the world lump of postwar suspicion.

It does not follow that the U. N. is slipping into the discard, as the League of Nations finally did. On the contrary, the U. N. seems to us to be gaining prestige. The low point in its influence was probably reached in 1947 when the President announced the Truman Doctrine without directly tying it in with the U. N. Charter. Senator Vandenberg was instrumental in supplying the missing link. More recently there was fear that the North Atlantic Pact and the mutual defense assistance program might spell the doom of the U. N. Here again the essential relation of both those regional policies to the U. N. was not adequately spelled out in the beginning. As they come into effect, however, it is more obvious that they are alternative devices for buttressing United Nations principles while the Security Council is hamstrung.

The denial of force to the U. N. appears actually to have enhanced its moral power. It is, as the President said, the living embodiment of the hopes and ideals of men everywhere. And those hopes and ideals are by no means static. Blocked in the realization of one aim, they "look forward to a continuing growth and evolution" of the U. N. as the agency of world peace. The fact that its armor is only principle does not mean that it is impotent or that it will fall into decay so long as men cherish ideals.

Martyrdom

General Bradley's standards for martyrdom are too exacting. "To be successful in a sacrifice," the chairman of Joint Chiefs of Staff told the House Armed Services Committee, "he must be 100 percent right; to be respected, a martyr must be completely unselfish in thought and motivation; his sacrifice must be for the good of the entire Nation. Under such requirements, I see few opportunities for martyrs in this defense controversy today." Well, of course, if the requirements are to be set so high, martyrdom will become as rare as sainthood. But in a world where every Tom, Dick and Harry seems to be aspiring to martyrdom, it is impossible to keep the calling so exclusive. As in olden times, when anyone who heard voices or saw visions stood a reasonably good chance of being sainted, so today anyone possessing a fraction of the qualifications prescribed by General Bradley may very well hope to find himself martyred.

Martyrs, General Bradley must understand, are made, not born. It is not so important to be 100 percent right as to be 100 percent certain of one's own rightness; zeal may do very well in the place of unselfishness; and, patently, a passion for self-immolation can always provide its own sense of sacrifice for the good of the Nation. Many a man has settled himself comfortably against the stake, secure in the knowledge that his martyrdom will be assured as soon as the match is applied to the faggots piled around him. The real reason for prevalence of martyrs, of course, is that there is always someone ready to apply the match.

Fruitless Hearings

Previously I have written in praise of Mr. Vinson's Armed Services Committee. I now write in bewilderment. What happened?

The final day of hearings have no resemblance to previous days. Mr. Johnson was not questioned point by point as we were given to believe he would be, and was supported by Mr. Vinson. As one who has sat throughout the hearings I am mystified. The hearings seemed to end right back where they began.

Up until the final day it appeared that we were approaching a position where the situation might become clarified, but then suddenly silence descended and we were left in midair. I repeat, what happened?

My opinion as to the effect of these hearings thus far are: Service feelings might now be stronger; the spirit of true unification still further away; the people more confused and thoroughly concerned.

'Trick Or Treat'

The note of intolerance expressed in the October 20 letter of Mrs. B. G. McIlwee opposing the traditional "trick or treat" celebration of Halloween by our youngsters was most distressing, for it displayed again the very spirit of unneighborliness, the tendency to detach ourselves into tight little groups with "no admittance" signs raised high that plagues our world these tumultuous days. Who could really believe, were he a friendly soul at heart, that the parents of the tots, who derive such innocent joy playing spook and witch at our doors on Beggars' Night "put their children out to beg?" Were she to look into the homes of these same children, I'll wager she'd find that the largess dispensed at their doors far outweighs the loot brought back. What harm if the children revel in the thrill of going masked to some neighbors' door?

Stockpiling The Bomb

The story in your issue of October 22 that American reports on the atom bomb had accelerated Russia's own research was wisely placed along the statement of Harold C. Urey, American scientist, who said that our own policy of secrecy has impeded atom production in the United States. Here we gave a good example of the nonsense that has been written and expressed ever since the Truman announcement that an atomic explosion had taken place.

It is only too easy to go along with the many who have one solution apropos Russia's success in working out atomic fission; namely, let's stockpile and stockpile the bomb. But the fallacy here is that the bomb, whether or not it is an absolute weapon (and General Bradley for one does not think so), is the most deadly weapon yet produced.

The bomb cannot be put in the same category with other munitions of war. There is strength, say, in producing more planes and guns and tanks than the enemy has. But the argument collapses when made to include the atom bomb. Does someone seriously consider whether it is better to destroy 150,000 enemy civilians or ten times that figure?

The people who talk of stockpiling the bomb simply forget the terrible effectiveness of releasing atomic energy on the heads of an entire people. To possess just one bomb is dangerous enough to any political enemy; it is hardly necessary to think in terms of many bombs.

Some experts have already pointed out that it may be better to have Russia and the United States possess the bomb since this may instill more caution into the leaders of both countries. After all, the most plausible reason why no country used poison gas in the last war was because all nations possessed gases of about the same deadliness.

But in the last analysis the only solution to the problem of atomic energy for war purposes would seem to be a firm agreement among all the United Nations not to manufacture atomic bombs and not to engage in a mad race to see which nation can turn out the weapon faster. Nothing will be gained by greater stockpiling.

Book of Lamach

Without going into niceties of of ancient Semitic languages, the scrolls now on exhibition in our Congressional Library, purporting to be the oldest manuscript form of certain parts of our Old Testament as yet discovered, contain the Book of Isaiah in Aramaic. This remarkable "find" includes an apocryphal book, so it is claimed, written by Lamach, the father of Noah.

If the Prophecy of Isaiah is written in Aramaic, it is a version of the original Hebrew, since the two languages, Aramaic and Hebrew while close akin, are different. The Aramaic or Chaldee, was the original tongue spoken by the people from whom Abraham came when he migrated to Palestine. What we now call "pure Hebrew," in which the Old Testament is almost wholly written, is the tongue of the immediate descendants of Abraham and not until their transportation into Babylonian captivity in 522 B. C., did the Hebrews adopt the Aramaic as their language.

From the period of the return of the Jews from Babylon, Aramaic became their linguistic medium. Hence, in the time of Christ, it was the form of "Hebrew" spoken by Jesus and his apostles along with Greek. Any book, therefore, which was originally written in Biblical Hebrew and translated into Aramaic, belongs to the "version" class of Biblical manuscripts. The Greek version of the Old Testament, begun probably 250 years before the Christian era, is a version of the original Hebrew and antedates the manuscript just discovered.

An apocryphal writing is the product of some anonymous writer who claims that what he writes has hitherto been a "hidden book." The author writes what supposedly the man whom he represents would say, even were he Enoch, Lamach or Noah. Such books were quite popular in the years prior to the Christian Era and a few years after. They are regarded as spurious by the body of Protestants and were rejected by the Jews in classing what belonged to the Canonical Scriptures. At the same time, the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament includes these books.

The body of intelligent opinion, particularly among Protestants, is that apocryphal writing is unreliable. If Lamach, father of Noah, wrote a book which has just come to light, anything can happen; even Stalin can become a Christian missionary!

Arnold Fare Increase

The Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. (Arnold Lines) has let it be known that it must raise fares 5 cents in order to pay an arbitration board's wage award to its employes.

The company estimates the cost of the wage award at $165,000 per year. To "cover" this increase, the company seeks a fare increase which it estimates may total $400,000 per year. The Arlington Civic Federation estimates the fare increase at $587,000 per year, or 3½ times the increased wage cost. Up to the time of the wage award, the company was balancing its books and earning net profits at a rate of $45,000 per year.

These facts are revealed in the letter of S. Harrison Kahn, counsel for the company, to the Interstate Commerce Commission, dated October 17, 1949, replying to the protests of various Arlington and Fairfax county civic organzations (Arlington Civic Federation, Arlington County Board, City of Falls Church, and Progressive Party of Northern Virginia) against the fare increase. If true, they would indicate that the company is not playing fair with its employes (who have yet to receive the higher wages awarded in early September) or the public. This may be the reason why the Interstate Commerce Commission has suspended the fare increase and ordered further investigation. BRUCE WAYBUR.

'Sartorial Contrast'

With regard to your October 21 editorial "Sartorial Contrast," isn't it strange the difference 150 years makes in one's perspective? It was around that time in our history, where your editorial reminds Western men of what we lost when we began to be regimented into our drab functional attire of today, that a distinguished American "attire in the simple costume of an American agriculturist took the blase French society by storm."

Thus likening Benjamin Franklin's visit to Paris in 1776 to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru's current visit to the United States, the question becomes obvious, "Has American society become so blase too, that we are so swayed by externals as to accord them undue weight in our appraisals of men?"

American dress is a mark of the American democrat, and was never intended to "set off men's figures and personalities." When we feel the urge for resplendency we join a fraternal organization where we can dress in all kinds of silly garb and no harm is done as would be the case were we to dress according to our personality or status in life. Machiavellian Concept

On October 18 Secretary of the Air Symington testified before the House Armed Services Committee:

"If this country's safety is at stake, I can't see the difference between stopping the functioning of the man on the lathe and the man who is a soldier . . . If civilians are going to be killed, I'd rather have them their civilians than our civilians."

Over 400 years ago Niccolo Machiavelli wrote:

"For where the very safety of the country depends upon the resolution to be taken, no considerations of justice or injustice, humanity or cruelty, nor of glory or of shame, should be allowed to prevail."

Perhaps the philosophy of Machiavelli, which we usually attribute to our enemies, is closer to us than we care to admit.

Finland's Link With The West

By Marquis Childs

Wood Exports

HELSINKI, Finland. — The economic power that America exercises in the world for good or ill could hardly be displayed more clearly than in this small country struggling to maintain its independence under the shadow of the Soviet Union. It is a power that can sustain the Finns in their struggle for freedom if it is used skillfully and wisely.

Nearly 90 percent of Finland's economy, with the export market included, is dependent on wood and wood products. For a hundred years the Finns have pushed an intelligent conservation program and the Finnish forests still yield one of the greatest timber harvests remaining on this denuded planet.

A year ago, with the beginning of the American recession and the onset of the dollar crisis, wood pulp prices began to decline. They dropped from 40 to 50 percent and the consequences here were serious. Moreover, the Finns found they could no longer sell their wood products to South American countries for dollars because South America had exhausted its dollar supply.

The net result is that in 1949 the Finns will have available about half the amount of dollars they had in 1948. And that means Finland will be forced into a closer economic embrace with Russia, which is certainly one of the objectives of the men in the Kremlin who want to make the states in the Soviet orbit completely dependent on Moscow. Finland will be increasingly oriented to the East rather than to the West.

AS THE price of wood pulp dropped and dollar purchases declined, a wage crisis in the wood industry developed. The Communists were quick to take advantage of it with exaggerated demands and eventually a strike that had as its real intention political and economic chaos and the seizure of power.

Thanks to the solid character of the great majority of the Finnish people and to the tough-minded capability of such younger men as 33-year-old Unto Varjonen, minister without portfolio, the Communists were defeated and the strike was ended. But that is far from meaning that the erisis in the wood industry is ended.

The answer is not necessarily in loans or handouts from the American Government. In the long run loans and handouts solve nothing. What is essential is to achieve some kind of meaningful economic exchange.

In Finland there is a good example of what might be possible. Out of their abundant timber resources the Finns manufacture prefabricated houses. Most of the 13,000 they have made in the past year and a half have gone to Russia as reparations.

But now with the reparations bill nearly paid they can sell the output of the prefab factories. It appears, however, that the only customer, for the time being at least, is the Soviet Union and that is unhealthy, both politically and economically.

THE UNITED STATES has a desperate need for housing for Alaska, both for troops stationed there and for civilians who are paying exorbitant rents. This is so urgent that Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, called public attention to it, implying that the lack of housing was a severe handicap in the defense of a vital territory.

The prefabricated houses made by the Finns are probably not up to American specifications. Americans here who have inspected them say they would not pass Army tests.

But, surely, if the United States would send a few experts here to work with the Finnish manufacturers, it would be possible to work out details of a ready-built house that would come up to minimum requirements. I would guess that the Finns could make such houses for half the American price and include the cost of delivery.

This is the kind of practical arrangement that could mean a great deal to Finnish independence. For America, where dwindling forest reserves are being rapidly cut down, it is plain common sense.

Economic dependence on Russia can bring the kind of pressure that can mean eventually political dependence. To pay the reparations bill Finland has created a metal industry that has turned out machines for Russia. New Finnish shipyards have sent ships across the Baltic to Leningrad.

There is not likely to be any market for this production except the Soviet Union once all the world gets caught up on its needs. That is at the outset a binding link with the East. The United States can see that positive steps are taken in the wood industry to counter this trend and those steps can be to America's advantage. That is the real way to wage the cold war.

"Parity Politics"

May I congratulate The Washington Post on the excellent column "Our Political Economy" and in particular the October 17 article on "Parity Politics" by Ysabel and Robert Rennie. As a piece of research, with the findings presented in an unbiased, scholarly manner, it is highly informative, intellectually honest and the type of column we expect to read in the enlightened informative columns of Washington's great daily.

Today And Tomorrow

Germany Revisited: The East

BONN, GERMANY—In the two preceding articles I discussed the relation of the Adenauer government at Bonn with France and the west and with eastern Germany. Here I may make a few observations on the possibility of a settlement towards the east.

THE ODER-NEISSE line, which has meant the annexation of large eastern territories by Poland and Russia is perhaps the greatest and the most dangerous consequence of the war in Europe. No German who hopes to have a political future in Germany, can or will accept these losses as final. Even if he were willing personally to do so he could not accept them because of the millions of refugees, who are a natural prey for the nationalists and the Nazis, and because the eastern agricultural territories cannot permanently be divorced economically from the industrial west.

But beyond that these eastern territories are the levers by which the Soviet Union dominates Polish-German relations. The Germans cannot recover the territory without Soviet consent except by war which would ruin them once more. The Poles can never hold the territory securely because they know that the Soviets always have the possibility of making an alliance with Germany by another partition of Poland.

THE QUESTION then is whether a German-Polish settlement, which both could find tolerable, is even conceivable.

From what I have learned I think it is just barely not inconceivable. It is just barely not inconceivable on the hypothesis that the Soviet Union—for reasons of its own, among them its greater hopes in Asia — is in fact in the process of a military withdrawal from Germany and the center of Europe.

In that event Poland and Germany would recover, if not complete independence, then at least a very much greater independence than either of them now enjoys. They might prefer an honorable compromise to the prospect of an everlasting quarrel which would ruin them both.

THAT COMPROMISE might be found in a joint neutralization of the territory. It is said, I think, on good authority that the Poles have not completely repopulated these territories. There is still much room in them. There are many deserted farms. There are many vacant jobs.

The Germans on the other hand, must find a place to settle the refugees. There is not room for them in western Germany or even in Germany up to the Oder-Neisse line. Thus there is a mutual interest, if the political relations could be made favorable, in an arrangement under which some or all of this territory would have a special status: one where a mixed German and Polish population could be brought together.

SUCH AN arrangement would demand immense statesmanship to achieve it. But I believe it could be made acceptable in Germany as long as the dominant power there remains, as it is at the moment, nonmilitarist, Federalist, and in the main hopeful about the revival of Germany within a united Europe.

Nothing ventured, nothing gained. One is entitled, I think, to feel some hope and to act accordingly.

U. S. Women Notified Life Begins at 50

New York, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—American women should give up their horror of growing old because life begins at 50, Norwegian author Lizzie Juvkam said today.

Mrs. Juvkam spurred to write "For Comfort in My Sorrow" after her husband's death in 1943, turned out her first novel at the age of 50. She arrived today aboard the Norwegian-American ship Stavangerfjord on her way to visit a nephew, Torkold Bogsrud, at Richmond, Va.

Economist Hits D. C. Handling Of Real Property Taxation

A District economist last night told a meeting of the Georgetown Citizens Association that Washington is considered "one of the worst jurisdictions in the country" in its handling of real property taxation.

Assessment and collection, Dr. C. E. McGuire said, were especially "capricious" here and left to clerks without professional training. "Over the past half century Washington has deteriorated sadly in its handling of real property taxation," he said.

Dr. McGuire, who lives at 3053 P st. nw., and himself a member of the Association, told the 30 members at the meeting in St. John's Parish Hall, Potomac and O sts. nw., that the tax situation here is bound up with the question of local self-government and representation in Congress.

Since, he said, the situation will probably get worse, he suggested that the Association establish a policy of finding out the backgrounds and origins of tax legislation and collection procedure.

The Association reversed its stand on transit broadcasts after hearing E. C. Giddings, vice president of Capital Transit Co., explain that revenues from the broadcasts may provide a "cushion" against future demands for rate increases.

Shirley Terrace

Members of the Shipley Terrace Citizens Association last night asked the District Commissioners to have street lights installed along Southern ave. and Congress st. se. east of 25th street.

At the same meeting at the Oxon Park Apartments, 2603 Southern ave. se., the 45 members present made plans for an outdoor Halloween party for about 500 children in the area and drafted tentative arrangements for a traffic safety program to be inaugurated soon in the neighborhood.

North Capitol

John F. Hardie, 1921 N. Capitol st., was reelected president of the North Capitol Citizens Association last night for his ninth consecutive term. The group met at the Atonement Lutheran Church, N. Capitol and U sts.

Others elected were William R. Sheehan, vice president replacing Baxter Smith, resigned; Miss Hazel L. Harper, reelected secretary-treasurer; Thomas L. Bigham, reelected financial secretary, and Joseph Norris, reelected delegate to the federation.

Miss Harper was also elected a delegate to the federation, while Hardie, Bigham and James A. Pitts were named delegates to the Northeast Council.

John J. McCauley spoke in favor of the radio music in streetcars and buses and on his motion a resolution for retaining the radios was passed.

Mid-City Citizens

John L. C. Sullivan, president of the Mid-City Citizens Association, was reelected for a second consecutive term at the association's meeting last night at the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw.

Other officers elected by the 70 persons present, one of the largest membership gatherings in the history of the association, were:

Soterios Nicholson, vice president; Maurice E. Salsbury, secretary; Mrs. Mary McDonald, financial secretary and treasury. Nicholson and Sullivan were named as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association.

Rally Hears Candidates

Candidates for State and local offices in Arlington County presented platforms to the Cherrydale Citizens Association last night at the Cherrydale Fire Hall.

J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, Democratic incumbents in the Virginia House of Delegates, defended their records from a charge that they have been "derelict in their duty."

I. Lee Potter, Republican candidate for the House, made the charge in connection with the incumbents' records on State Milk Commission hearings, jury duty for Virginia women and their stand on a State sales tax.

Damm said Potter "never studied these problems until he became a candidate."

The two Democrats said they had "served their apprenticeship in civic activity prior to seeking public office," and that Arlington's Democratic delegates since 1934 have opposed the State Milk Commission, and "never have favored any legislation which permits price-fixing of commodities."

They said also that since 1930 Arlington's delegates have favored "permissive" legislation under which women could serve or not as they chose. The speakers emphasized their hostility of many years to a sales tax.

Robert W. Cox, nominee for the county board, said the incumbent Democrat, Basil M. DeLashmutt, is running on his "record." "You can see the record," Cox said, "in our streets, our lack of sidewalks and our lack of recreation."

He attacked DeLashmutt's record on public utilities, citing a 1947 report of the local Public Utilities Commission which recommended an investigation of gas rates. He said DeLashmutt opposed the inquiry.

Jacob C. Bechtel, independent candidate, charged that DeLashmutt is a "poor" businessman for Arlington's government, accusing him of not "economizing' where it is "necessary."

Denman T. Rucker, Arlington Commonwealth attorney, spoke for DeLashmutt, after announcing he could not appear.

He cited DeLashmutts 10-year record which he termed "progressive and sound."

Bazelon Involved

War Claim Reopening Is Probed

By Robert S. Allen

Attorney General Howard McGrath is looking into an extraordinary affair involving one of his top assistants, a United States Senator, and the daughter of a convicted Nazi agent.

The assistant is Alien Property Custodian David Bazelon, who was appointed to the Federal Circuit Court by President Truman last week.

The Senator is William Langer (R., N. Dak.).

The woman is Mrs. Ruth Moore, German-born daughter of Otto Kuehn, a German national who resided in Hawaii many years. Kuehn was sentenced to death for treason during the war. Later the sentence was commuted to 50 years and he was deported to Germany. His German wife and daughter also returned to Germany, during the war, on the Swedish ship Gripsholm.

The extraordinary affair was Bazelon's sudden reopening of Mrs. Moore's previously rejected claim to property confiscated by the Government.

Her claim had been denied by the Justice Department early this year, after extended consideration. Under the law her only recourse was appeal to the courts. Instead, Bazelon abruptly reopened the case and ordered a new hearing.

The case is the first one to be reopened by Bazelon. Similarly, his precipitousness was most unusual. He staged the hearing on less than 24 hours' notice.

Also, Mrs. Moore's recent return from Germany is unexplained. She obtained American citizenship through marriage shortly before Pearl Harbor. She and her husband were later divorced. Mrs. Moore is arguing for reconsideration of her claim on the ground she is a loyal American and a deserving citizen.

Finally, Langer is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. This is the committee that will pass on Bazelon's elevation to the Federal bench. With a number of others, Bazelon's appointment was laid over until Congress reconvenes next January.

This puts Langer in the position of holding a whip-hand over Bazelon.

The North Dakotan accompanied Mrs. Moore to the suddenly called hearing. He stated he had become interested in the case through the intercession of his daughter. Langer said his daughter felt Mrs. Moore had been unfairly treated. He did not explain how his daughter had become interested in the matter.

Silver Spring Unit Asks Road Improvement

The Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring, Md., last night unanimously called for improvement of Montgomery County sections of Old Bladensburg rd. and Colesville rd.

The group in a resolution said Old Bladensburg rd. from the Prince Georges County line to Viers Mill rd. considering the fact it was a major highway connecting the Washington-Baltimore highway at the University of Maryland and Route 40 at Rockville, was in "deplorable" condition and should be widened and improved.

Similarly, the group said Colesville rd. from Franklin ave., Silver Spring to White Oak where the Naval Ordnance Laboratory is located should be improved.

Governor Gets Copy

Copies of the resolution are being directed to the Maryland State Roads Commission, the Governor, county council and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The resolutions were introduced by Willard Morris, chairman of the group's highway committee.

The group also unanimously approved a resolution requesting the planning commission to erect a community center in Silver Spring equipped with stage, and adequate to meet the needs of the community, and to seek the support of civic and other groups in promoting the measure.

The resolution was introduced by C. W. Combs, chairman of the civic improvement committee.

Speaks on Taxation

In another resolution offered by the same committee, the group asked the planning commission to designate street locations to avoid duplication.

Alexander Hancock, Montgomery County director of finance, spoke on the subject of taxation at the meeting, held in the Liquor Control Building.

Hancock said it takes $11,280 in property assessments to pay the cost of a student in the county. "If education costs rise in the next 30 years as much as they have in the past 30 years," he said, "we will have educated ourselves out of our homes."

U. N. Club Seeks to End Debt Problem

The United Nations Club, 1701 19th st. new., held a reorganization meeting last night and elected 12 new trustees in an effort to overcome a $32,000 in debts.

The new board promptly scheduled a meeting for 4:30 p. m. today to consider a new slate of officers and to weigh means of pulling the club out of the red.

The club held a four-hour membership meeting October 18 when its general counsel, Garland Taylor, disclosed that $17,406 in taxes and $15,000 in unpaid bills were outstanding.

Resignations had been submitted by club President Meredith Howard, former Follies star, now married to former Representative Richard F. Harless of Arizona; by Treasurer A. L. Wheeler, chairman of the District Central Democratic Committee, and Manager Frank C. Frantz.

Only two members of the former board of trustees, Richard E. Shands, McLean, Va., an attorney; and Dr. Walter W. Boyd, River rd. and Wilson lane, Bethesda, were elected to the board.

Others named include Mrs. James W. Sinclair, 3429 34th st. nw.; Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson, 3121 O st. nw.; Mrs. Theodore Babbitt, 3203 Macomb st. nw.; Miss Marion Agnes DeLano, 3700 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Mrs. A. M. Nevius, 1639 19th st. nw.; Mrs. Robert Freer, 3218 Cleveland ave. nw.; Miss Mary M. Stuart-Price, 7015 Rolling rd., Chevy Chase, Md., Matthew G. Jones, 1850 47th pl. nw.

Falls Church Council Votes School Building Referendum

The Falls Church City Council last night authorized a referendum on a $700,000 bond issue for school construction.

The council, in approving the referendum to be held November 22, cut $200,000 from a request submitted by the city school board.

The $700,000 figure was approved after Councilman Lee Rhodes warned that the city's borrowing capacity is only about $976,000.

"I certainly don't think we should devote all of that to a single project," he said.

Mrs. Mark Reagan, school board chairman, said original plans called for a junior-senior high school, elementary school and extensive improvements to the Madison Elementary School.

In view of the council's reduction, she said, the plans will be revised at a special meeting of the school board soon. She was not prepared to predict whether the whole program would be carried out with some curtailment of each project, or whether one would be abandoned.

Mrs. Reagan said the board hopes to have the new buildings ready by September, 1950, to offset what she described as an "unsatisfactory school condition now existing."

Although the city gained its independence from Fairfax County in August, 1948, it did not acquire title to three schools located in the city limits.

2 Sue for $76,000 In County Tree Losses

Two suits totaling $76,000 were filed in Montgomery County Court yesterday by two Bethesda-Chevy Chase residents who claimed a barrel stave company took white oak timber from their property.

Willard M. Kiplinger, publisher of Kiplinger Letters, who lives at 6609 River rd. Bethesda, and William and Aileen Wrightson, 4 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, sued Clarence Brady and H. B. McLaughlin, copartners of the B-M Stave Co. of Clarkesburg, W. Va. Kiplinger estimated his loss of 50 trees at $40,000, the Wrightson's asked $36,000.

They are Harris Tweeds

If you ever saw the spinners, dyers and weavers on the Islands of Harris and Lewis (off the Scotch coast) you would understand why Harris tweeds are world-famous.

No other cloth has so much hand work—slow, old-fashioned methods and so honest in every hand-woven inch. The dyes are not synthetic chemicals but are from native plants and seaweed. They cannot take the life from the fibers.

Always the colors are soft browns, tans and greys typical colorings of the Scotch moors, and the foliage of heather.

F.B.M.A. Set To Seat McKee As New Head

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Federation of Business Men's Association will install new officers at its Silver Anniversary meeting tomorrow night in the Mayflower. More than 400 are expected to attend.

McKee

Jerome B. McKee will be seated as F.B.M.A. president. Active in civic affairs, McKee is legislative chairman of the District of Columbia American Legion, and in 1947 was executive director of the D. C. Retail Liquor Dealers Association. He is a wholesale liquor salesman with the House of Stover.

Other new officers will be Dr. Leo F. Diegelmann, first vice president; Leo Hessler, second vice president, and Louis Fricke, secretary.

Guest speaker will be Calvin D. Johnson, former Republican Representative from Illinois.

The federation is composed of 33 business and professional associations with a membership of more than 5000. It serves as a clearinghouse and mouthpiece for problems of the smaller Washington businessmen.

MORE BONDS: The Maryland Roads Commission yesterday authorized the sale of $6,425,000 in additional bonds to finance the bridge across the Chesapeake Bay. Originally, a $37,500,000 issue was floated to pay the cost of the big span, but bids by contractors pushed the advance estimates to 41 million dollars. The difference between that and the $43,925,000 total of the two bond issues is for contingencies.

George R. Browder has been appointed assistant director of advertising and merchandising for Hudson Motor . . . Hugh D. Combs, executive vice president of the United States & Fidelity Co., spoke yesterday at a meeting of the District Association of Insurance Agents in the Mayflower.

ANNIVERSARY: Oldtimers in Washington's financial district prefer not to observe this anniversary. Twenty years ago this week the stock market crashed in a tragic ending to an era of prosperity. On Monday and Tuesday (October 28 and 29 in 1929), grim brokers and their staffs worked far into the night. Sales on "Black Tuesday" totaled more than 16 million shares. The stock market of today has come a long way from the market of 1929. The past 20 years have been a period of purification. The Securities and Exchange Commission, created by Congress, is the watchdog of the securities business. The SEC has a keen eye and it is now respected as well as feared.

EARNINGS: Northwest Airlines Inc. reported net income of $1,984,104 or $2 a common share for the nine months ended September 30, against a net loss of $2,120,251 for the same 1948 period. Other earnings statements:

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Cotton futures closed steady today, unchanged to 65 cents a bale higher; old crop deliveries moved in a narrow range, with mill covering against textile sales offset by hedging. New Orleans demand accounted for gains of 60 to 75 cents a bale in the new-crop positions, with buying attracted by the discounts at which those deliveries are selling compared with the old-crop months.

Upsets Drop Kentucky, Tar Heels Out of Top Ten

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The Redskins made no friends on Sunday at Philadelphia, with the exception of the Eagles who were glad to have Admiral Whelchel's little gentlemen aboard. If it wasn't the worst Redskin exhibition since the 73-0 debacle against the Bears in 1940, its parallel is unremembered.

But as a television show, the Redskins were historic. It must have been the first three-dimensional video offering since electronics came into the living room. Thanks to the Redskins ragged play, video could offer (1) sight, (2) sound, and (3) smell.

POVICH

The charge isn't made often by a football coach, but one of that fraternity who was scouting the two teams for his own boss, said bluntly between the halves: "The Redskins are playing like a team that's timid and scared to mix it."

The more generous observation is that the Redskins were in too far over their heads—that they didn't belong on the same field with the Eagles despite their presence on it. It was Greasy Neale's men versus Adm. Whelchel's boys, with the Redskins' preseason clippings lost in the shuffle.

TO WHAT heights the score might have mounted if Neale were not suddenly overcome with a new compassion and the awareness of the next game with the Steelers, is a matter of sad conjecture to Redskin fans. Leading 35-7 at the half, Neale withheld Steve Van Buren from the final two quarters, and his other ace, Bosh Pritchard, took the ball on only three plays.

Sammy Baugh and Harry Gilmer were running for their lives on most of their pass attempts against that big, eager Eagle line that was pouring through the so-called forward wall of the Redskins all afternoon. On a day when Baugh completes only four passes, something is wrong besides his passing arm. Gilmer had a slight advantage. He could both get rid of the ball and run, in self-defense.

Even against the second-string Eagles in the second half, the Redskins were outscored, 2 to 1. Worse than that, they were a demoralized team. Their pass defense machinery was pathetic, and the only reason Quarterback Tommy Thompson didn't complete five pitches in a row at one point was because his throws were dropped by Eagle receivers in the clear.

THE REDSKINS are out of contention for the Eastern Division title, almost before they were in it. At the end of five games, they show three defeats and are in front of only the New York Bulldogs, who have yet to win a game. The change in coaches hasn't wrought any improvement; in fact, last year's team performed better, under unimaginative Turk Edwards.

If the Redskins' young talent is in over its head, then so, perhaps, is Head Coach Whelchel. Certainly he hasn't developed anything, or anybody very thrilling, and he can be called a young coach, too. He moved into the league without any pro football background, or any experience with the T-formation, and with those two lacks the Redskins are trying to get over a tough parlay.

George Marshall has been hinting that there'll be changes made in the Redskins, but doesn't amplify. Whelchel is apparently safe, with his five-year contract. Marshall agreed to that, when last summer he signed the retiring admiral as his new coach amid extravagant unveiling scenes. At that time, one skeptic observed that if Marshall hadn't signed a successful coach, at least, and at last, the guy achieved one long-time dream: He became the only civilian with a naval aide.

WHEN TURK EDWARDS, the former all-league tackle, was head coach the complaint was that he didn't qualify for the overall job. Edwards' forte was line play, and coaching the line. All of a sudden this season, the Redskins dismissed Edwards as line coach for the new post as scout and gave over the line duties to Herman Ball, of doubtful reputation as such.

It's in the line that the Redskins look the worst, especially in the tackling and blocking fundamentals. Against the Eagles, they were a feeble crew, both on offense and defense. Whelchel supposedly is a fundamentalist, and he had to be angry at what he saw. The Eagles were not only knocking the Redskin linemen down, but helping them up in a most patronizing manner.

The Redskins' front office is learning, too, that there is no substitute for a good football team. Despite the fact that Baugh was leading the league in everything connected with passing, the Redskins were no great drawing card in Philadelphia where only 28,855 fans were attracted. That's not good box-office, by Redskin precedents.

Idle Irish Still Tops; Army Next

By Jack Hand

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—North Carolina and Kentucky dropped out of football's "First Ten" as the result of their first defeat of the season Saturday.

Michigan, on the other hand, zoomed back into the elite class by whaling Minnesota. The Wolverines are now sixth.

The Tar Heels, 13-7 victims to L. S. U., dumped them from sixth to thirteenth in the Associated Press weekly poll while Coach Bear Bryant's Wildcats, seventh last week, fell to fourteenth, after their 20-7 loss to S. M. U.

Notre Dame, idle Saturday, still rules the roost as the Nation's No. 1 football team, according to 84 per cent of the voters.

Despite an open date in the Irish schedule, 120 of the 143 sports writers and broadcasters participating in the balloting put Notre Dame on top for the third straight week. A week ago they received 146 of 179.

Army Draws 12 Votes

Army, on a 63-6 romp over Columbia, strengthened its runnerup position. The Cadets drew 12 first place votes and a flock of seconds and thirds for a point total of 1,218 as compared to Notre Dame's leading 1,387.

Oklahoma, another of the seven major unbeaten, untied clubs in the top 10, moved up a peg to third on a 48-0 rout of Nebraska.

The wave of upsets had a telling effect on the rankings. Minnesota tumbled from third to seventh after dropping from the unbeaten ranks on a 14-7 loss to Michigan.

Griff Bids For Yankees' Stirnweiss

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats are now making an attempt to acquire George Stirnweiss, veteran Yankee second baseman, as their first move to bolster Manager Bucky Harris' 1950 infield.

Clark Griffith made the offer for Stirnweiss yesterday in negotiations with Del Webb, Yankee co-owner, who was closeted with him at Griffith Stadium.

Webb, close friend of the Washingtonown er, called at Griffith's office to pay his respects, but the visit was quickly channeled into trade talk.

Griffith suggested a cash purchase of Stirweiss. Webb preferred to talk on a player-trade basis and indicated the Yankees' willingness to make a deal that would involve either First Baseman Eddie Robinson of Pitcher Ray Scarborough.

Griff Rejects Proposition

The Nats' owner rejected both propositions. Webb countered with a cash price-tag on Stirnweiss that Griffith called "out of line."

It was indicated that the negotiations would be resumed during the December meeting of the club owners in New York.

Stirnweiss, 30-year-old former batting and base-stealing champion of the league, his only .261 lact year and was edged out of the regular second base job by Rookie Gerry Coleman.

Harris Wants Stirnweiss

The offer for Stirnweiss was at the suggestion of New Manager Bucky Harris, who esteems the player's fielding ability and speed on the bases. "On a double play, there isn't a better pivot man in the league," said Harris.

The Detroit Tigers are also known to be bidding for Stirnweiss, but the Yankees reportedly are reluctant to strengthen the first-division Detroit club, preferring to deal with the Nats on any comparative basis.

Second base was the weakest spot in the Washington infield last season with neither Al Kozar nor Sherry Robertson measuring up to big league calibre. Kozar's hitting was disappointing, as also was his weak throwing arm. Robertson, with a stronger arm, was erratic as a fielder.

Titone TKOs Cooper in Sixth Round

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Charlie Titone, Brooklyn lightweight scored a smashing upset last night at Turner's Arena when he knocked out District Featherweight Champ Jimmy Cooper after 56 seconds of the sixth round.

Cooper was saved by the bell at the end of the fifth round when Titone had the local boy down from a hard right.

During the minute between rounds, Cooper's seconds worked frantically to revive Jimmy, but he was a wobbly lad when he answered the bell for Round 6.

Titone lost a split decision to Cooper earlier this year and seemed on the way to another loss until he landed the right late in the fifth. The crowd of 1004 thought that Titone had won at that point, but he was barely on his feet at the bell.

Both weighed 124.

Pat Thomas, 132, Washington, took a decision over Billy Unk, 137½, Washington in the semi-final five-rounder.

In preliminary fours, Battling Moore, 186½ decisioned Kid Saucer, 179½, in an all local battle.

George Carrigan, 156½, Baltimore, won a TKO decision over Tony Mayfield, 160, Washington, after 23 seconds of the fourth. Jimmy O'Brien, 152½, Baltimore, knocked out Gene Kelley, 156½, Washington, after only 2:52 of the first.

The gross was $1904.75, and the net $1425.25.

—'Terrible,' He Says—

Even Expert Williamson Admits Results Were Rough

By Paul D. Williamson

LAST week was terrible!!!

In no other week during the 19 years of the Williamson system did a relatively greater number of "hopeless" teams rise up to thump down their respective grid opponents—and hard!

Often the loser was a heralded champion. And the system was not alone in those startling upsets. Practically everybody else went down on them.

There were no less than 30 results, in all classes of play, which could be called "nuts," "absolutely nuts," "crazy," "plumb crazy," "terrible," and similar ejaculative outbursts.

The results of three of the leading games alone confounded the experts. Michigan 14, Minnesota 7; SMU 20, Kentucky 7; LSU 13, North Carolina 7.

AND the funny thing is that the consistency of the Williamson post-game ratings is higher at this time of the season than for any previous year. That is, a surprising number of the upsets could be straightened out after the games and brought in line with more consistent ranking of "winners ought to be rated over losers."

Powerful Army took over the No. 1 spot while idle Notre Dame slipped into second place. The last was partly because of readjustment of Tulane's squeak by 16-6 over Auburn. Oklahoma moved up two notches to No. 4, and Baylor three notches to No. 5.

The other 10 leaders of the week included in order Penn, Michigan, Rice, Minnesota and Southern California.

Excellent to exceptionally good picks by the system last week included Mississippi Southern 33, Chattanooga 20; Westmar 8, Buena Vista 6; McMurry 21, Abilene Christian 0; Cincinnati 21, Western Reserve 13; Fordham 47, Syracuse 21; TCU 33, Mississippi 27; West Texas 55, Trinity 20; Arkansas 7, Vanderbilt 6; Troy State 6, Austin Peay 0; Wyoming 13, Utah 0, and many others in major and minor circles.

Tulane Drops Irish in 1951

New Orleans, Oct. 24 (AP).—Tulane University will break off football relations with Notre Dame after the 1950 game, the university reported here today.

Horace Renegar, director of public relations at Tulane, said, "schedule consideration precludes continuing the Tulane-Notre Dame football series beyond the present contract of 1950."

Notre Dame will play Tulane in New Orleans on Oct. 14, 1950, as the final game under the existing contract. Notre Dame handed Tulane a 46-7 defeat this year at South Bend, Ind., to topple Tulane from the unbeaten ranks.

Ed Krause, athletic director at Notre Dame, said "we have had pleasant relations with Tulane and naturally had intended to continue."

"There are plenty of teams—too many in fact—wish to play Notre Dame," Krause continued. "We do not play in bowl games, however, and we have been thinking of playing a 10-game schedule for that reason.

Last week he said in an Indianapolis talk "there are plenty of good teams eager to get on our schedule. We would like to play the nine toughest teams in the country, including Michigan, Army and Minnesota, every year."

Wildcat Skaters Win 3d Straight

Washington-Baltimore's Wildcats scored their third consecutive Roller Derby victory over the Brooklyn Bombers, 19-16, last night at Uline Arena before a Ladies' Night crowd of 5683.

Leading the Bombers four games to one in the 11-night series which ends Sunday, the Wildcats will be out to make it four in row tonight at 8:30 at Uline's.

Washington-Baltimore skated last night without the services of Capt. Georgeanna Kemp, who was ill, and lost Mary Gardner in the seventh period with an injured left ankle.

Jake, Cerdan Clash Dec. 2

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Middleweight Champion Jake Lamotta of New York today agreed to defend his title against Marcel Cerdan in Madison Square Garden, December 2.

Lamotta, who won the 160-pound crown from the Frenchman in Detroit last June 16, and Cerdan had been scheduled to meet in a return clash last September 28. But Lamotta injured his right shoulder in training and the bout was postponed.

Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club which will promote the 15-rounder, said the principals had agreed to accept the standard $1000 fee for television rights for Garden fights. Lamotta had demanded a larger cut of the video rights or no television at all.

Del Baker Gets Harris' Old Job

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 24 (AP).—The San Diego baseball club of the Pacific Coast League today announced Del Baker would be its next manager.

Baker, the announcement said, has been hired by the Cleveland Indians for the San Diego job under a working agreement between the two clubs. He succeeds Bucky Harris who has resigned to take over again as manager of the Washington Senators.

Fairfax Plans $75,000 Clubhouse

Ground has been broken for the construction of a new $75,000 clubhouse at the Fairfax Golf Club, one of the finest public courses in the East.

The new structure will have showers, lockers and a large lunchroom. It will be ready in April. The old white house which now serves as a clubhouse will not be torn down until the new one is completed.

Area Coach of Week

Art Guepe of Virginia

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

ONE OF these days the Football Coaches' Union will take up Art Guepe's membership card.

The young Virginia mentor is too optimistic to be a member in good standing of the world's gloomiest organization.

In September, for instance, he said out loud that his Cavaliers would win their first five games. They have and today they're the area's only unbeaten, untied club.

The 32-13 victory over VMI Saturday climaxed the first phase of Virginia's 1948 schedule. The soft pickings are over and from here on in, Guepe & Co. face West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Tulane and North Carolina in the order named.

That's a rough dish, but not rough enough for Guepe to cringe and holler "we'll be murdered." The former Marquette star isn't built that way and his players aren't either. Both he and they think they'll do all right the rest of the way.

Guepe is blessed with one of the best runners in the land, Fullback Johnny Papit, and he makes full use of him.

"WHY CONFINE his running through the tackles and guards when he can run as well outside?" he asks. "I feel the same way about Papit as a basketball coach does a good shooter: he can shoot from anywhere he wants to and anyway he wishes as long as he scores. Papit is doing that for us."

The Cavaliers were odds on favorite to brush off VMI Saturday, but when the third quarter arrived the score was VMI 13 and Virginia 13. Worried? Not Guepe. He knew he had Papit and Steve Osisek going for him, that they hadn't failed him yet and they wouldn't that day. They didn't.

Not one of Virginia's first five victims—George Washington, Miami of Ohio, V. P. I., W. & L., or V. M. I.—is a topflight team, but that doesn't diminish Guepe's or Virginia's standings. The Cavaliers were supposed to beat 'em all and they did, by good scores, too.

What else can you ask of a coach?

his meeting with DeOrsey yesterday. He paced his office with a "what can I do?" expression on his face.

sionals, not next year but now, may see important developments as early as today. Much may hinge on a single phone call expected by DeOrsey.

"Of course, I know something has got to be done," he fumed. "That was as horrible an exhibition as we've ever given. But I don't think firing our coach (Billick Whelchel) or fining our players is going to solve anything. We've got to do something else."

Whelchel sat quietly at his desk and patiently explained that the Redskins' greenness—"four rookies on our defensive line, three rookies in our offensive backfield"—might have accounted for the pitiful display.

"We were just Eagled to death," he said. "Almost any young team is going to look that bad against the power of the Eagles. I can't explain why we looked so horrible on fundamentals—simple blocking and tackling—except that the players just weren't 'up' for the game. Inspiration counts for a lot, you know."

There is little doubt that Marshall would sell his Redskin stock if he received an attractive offer. Marshall has been quoted as saying he would do so. He has strong ties in California.

Pimlico Opens Meet Today With Governor Bowie Handicap

Gasparilla, 5 Others Run In Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico's old hilltop track, which almost sang it's swan song recently, will be a mighty live corpse for the next 21 racing days.

The longest meeting ever staged there—17 days for the Maryland Jockey Club and four for Havre de Grace—opens today with a 1:15 p. m. post time.

With the $15,000 winner-take-all Pimlico Special due to feature Calumet's Coaltown vs. Greentree's Capot on Friday, the session gets off on a stake down beat today with the $7500 added Governor Bowie Handicap as the feature.

The Governor Bowie Handicap, a marathon test that has held interest since first contested in 1909, is at the separate-the-men-from-the-boys distance of a mile and 6 furlongs.

Field of Six Named

A field of six were named over night, including the two routers who are expected to draw the bulk of the mutuel play, A. J. Sackett's Gasparilla, winner of the Sagamore and C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy, winner of the Grayson.

In addition to the Special and the Governor Bowie, this week also brings a 2-year-old stake clash in the $15,000 added The Marguerite. The race is a counter part of the Pimlico Futurity except that it is for 2-year-old fillies exclusively.

This mile and a sixteenth event will be another test for Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Bed O' Roses, decisive winner of last Saturday's Selima Stakes at Laurel. The daughter of Rosemont will meet some new opposition this time.

Other stakes on the Pimlico agenda are $7500 Added Battleship Steeplechase Handicap at 2 miles on November 3; $25,000 Added Pimlico Futurity at a mile and a sixteenth on November 5; $7500 Added Manly Steeplechase Handicap at 2½ miles on November 10; $15,000 Added Pimlico Cup Handicap at 2½ miles (on flat) November 12, and $15,000 Added Riggs Handicap at 1½ miles on November 17.

Betting at Laurel gained momentum during the closing stages. With many new horses and several top-flight stables being in action, Pimlico expects both betting and attendance to improve sharply over Laurel.

Anacostia Eagles Have Open Dates

The Anacostia Eagles unlimited team has open dates, November 6 and December 4. Teams interested should contact B. T. Blair, Lincoln 3-8683.

Oxon Hill Wins, 2-0

Oxon Hill High defeated Laurel, 2-0, yesterday in a Prince Georges County soccer game at Laurel. Bob Butler and Frank Clifton booted in the goals as the Hillmen gained their third victory without a loss.

Bill Bennings Says:

Dear Folks: A currently popular song refers to "A Room Full of Roses." A few hundred bucks would buy a room full of roses, but it's doubtful if Bed O'Roses could be purchased at any price. Bed O'Roses, of course, is the name of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's crack 2-year-old filly, the Nation' leading money-winning juvenile, thank you. She not only is running to glory, but she's doing racing a big favor in another way. Apparently, Vanderbilt's interest in racing was waning and the sport was losing a loyal backer. Then along came Bed O'Roses and we find Alfred G. slipping down from New York to see her in action. Vanderbilt never has been a stand up and shout or a finger snapping horse rooter, but when he broke out in a big grin as Bed O'Roses romped home in the Selima—well, he's still a race-tracker.

Car Credit Shoots for 40th Win in Row

Club Is Running Out of Opponents

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THE BEST FOOTBALL coaching record in town is owned by a 24-year-old bricklayer.

His name is Sabatino DeLeonibus, and his Car Credit unlimited sandlot team has not lost a game in four years. They're shooting for their fortieth straight win Sunday when they play Silver Spring A. C. at Montgomery Blair High.

Sabatino's football experience consists of a year as tackle for McKinley Tech High in 1943. Four of his brothers have also played at Tech.

A keen student of the game, Sabatino used to remain after practice and discuss strategy with his Tech Coach Duke Jacobs, former Chicago Bears star. He learned all about the split T formation.

Sabatino wanted to be a coach, but knew that he wouldn't get a chance to go to college and train himself. So he took up bricklaying as a trade and during his off hours, he organized his own team from among his neighborhood buddies.

THEIR SUCCESS was immediate. Sabatino talked Car Credit Co. into sponsoring the club and entered it into the Metropolitan Unlimited Football League in 1946. It won three straight championships without losing a game. Car Credit so outclassed it opposition that this year the league was disbanded.

Sabatino is tickled pink over this year's club, which has won all five of its starts. But you can tell that he's a little partial to his 1947 team as his favorite.

On that team were Andy Davis, George Washington's tailback; Johnny Hughes, Georgetown wingback, and Guard Bill Poms and Halfback Joe Dunn of Catholic University.

This year's team has a few boys whom the nearby colleges would give an arm for. They are:

Jack George, the former St. John's High great, who commutes every Sunday from La-

MOE ZANGER, the former Georgetown freshman star, who dropkicks 50 yards, and handles the Car Credit kickoffs, field goals and conversions.

Bob Troll, who was a halfback star at Maryland just after the war.

Sabaton has a squad of 33 players and no problem of discipline. George is the only player who has missed a practice session this season, and the team holds a one-hour indoor drill at Merrick Boys Club three times a week.

Most of the players come to practice after getting off work. Tackle Hot Healy and Fullback Steve Orsini are plumbers. Guard Bill Patterson is a telephone lineman.

Each of the players is fully equipped and uniformed and provided with insurance by Car Credit—even Guard Bob Kramer, a used car salesman, who works for the rival Northeast Motor Sales.

Salle College in Philadelphia to play quarterback.

Baltimoreans Win District Bridge Title

By Marian H. Barre
Post Reporter

The District of Columbia Bridge championship for immediate pairs was won by two Baltimoreans, Frank D. Levi and Saul Greenberg, in the closing hours Sunday of the four-day tournament, held at the Shoreham Hotel.

It was the only title lost by local players, who had previously captured four other trophies.

By virtue of her open pair win on Saturday, Mrs. R. H. Skinner became a life master, the highest rating among bridge players. There are only about 230 life masters in the whole country.

Mrs. Skinner's partner in the event was Lewis G. Tubbs, president of the Washington Bridge League.

Runners-up to Team Champions Col. R. H. Skinner, J. G. Stone, W. A. Poissant and David Murray, were the local trio of J. D. Boyd, John Moore and Larry Reynolds, with Mrs. Sandra Fox of Coral Gables the fourth member.

'Fancy Dans' Label Called 'Unfortunate'

Boston, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), personally entered the unification fight today by saying that Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, should withdraw his description of Navy admirals as "Fancy Dans."

McCormack said Bradley's description, delivered during testimoney before the House Armed Services Committee in Washington, D. C., was "unwise and unfortunate."

"It was disrespectful," McCormack added in a statement released from his Boston office. "Gen. Bradley should withdraw that unfortunate remark from his statement."

Postlude

Pianist Plays Brilliantly At Gallery

By Paul Hume

Marjorie Mitchell played an excellent recital last night in the Phillips Gallery.

Her program was as well played as it was well chosen. One of the brief but fascinating preludes and fugues from Bach's Well Tempered Clavichord led into Cesar Franck's Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue.

Miss Mitchell's command of tone was apparent from the beginning of the recital. She colors the piano with varied beauty in all dynamic ranges. She has the power to draw from it a pure singing tone. How fortunate that she also knows when to employ this tone and when to blend all voices of a composition into a fusion of sound.

Sonata Finley Played

Two Debussy Preludes preceded Ravel's Forlane and Toccata. Two of Samuel Barber's Excursions were the American additions to the evening. The sonata was the third of Prokofieff.

This piece disclosed the finest playing of the concert. The opening toccata was brilliantly set forth. Succeeding quieter pages were well-conceived and realized. The finale rose to the same exciting level as the opening. This is a fine sonata and it was a great pleasure to hear it again.

Choosing the least played of Chopin's four Ballades, that in F Major, the pianist brought another kind of success to her already highly favored evening. Except for a slight rushing of a crucial phrase in the opening theme, she delivered the ballade with both strength and poetry, resisting all temptations toward unnecessary and disturbing fluctuations of tempo.

Never Forces a Tone

Marjorie Mitchell's gifts are of fine, solid kinds. She understands different periods and schools of music. She also understands the nature of the piano and of its music. She never forces her tone and it is always of lovely quality.

Greater use of arm and back muscles would give her tone more substance and make easier such big pages as the closing of the Franck fugue. This work needs a bit more study in pedaling and its middle section can be more controlled.

She is a fine pianist, well grounded and promising a rewarding future.

County Needs Firms—Sasscer

A plea for more industrial establishments, Government buildings and Federal employment in Prince Georges County was made last night by Rep. Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), in an address before the County Chamber of Commerce.

He spoke at the organization's 25th annual dinner at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club, Landover, Md.

Rep. Sasscer pointed out that the county's population grew from 47,000 in 1930 to 67,000 in 1940, and has doubled since.

Need for industries is especially urgent, Sasscer said, because they provide a tax base which compensates for many low-taxed dwellings which require a high expenditure of tax money for schools, roads, and welfare services.

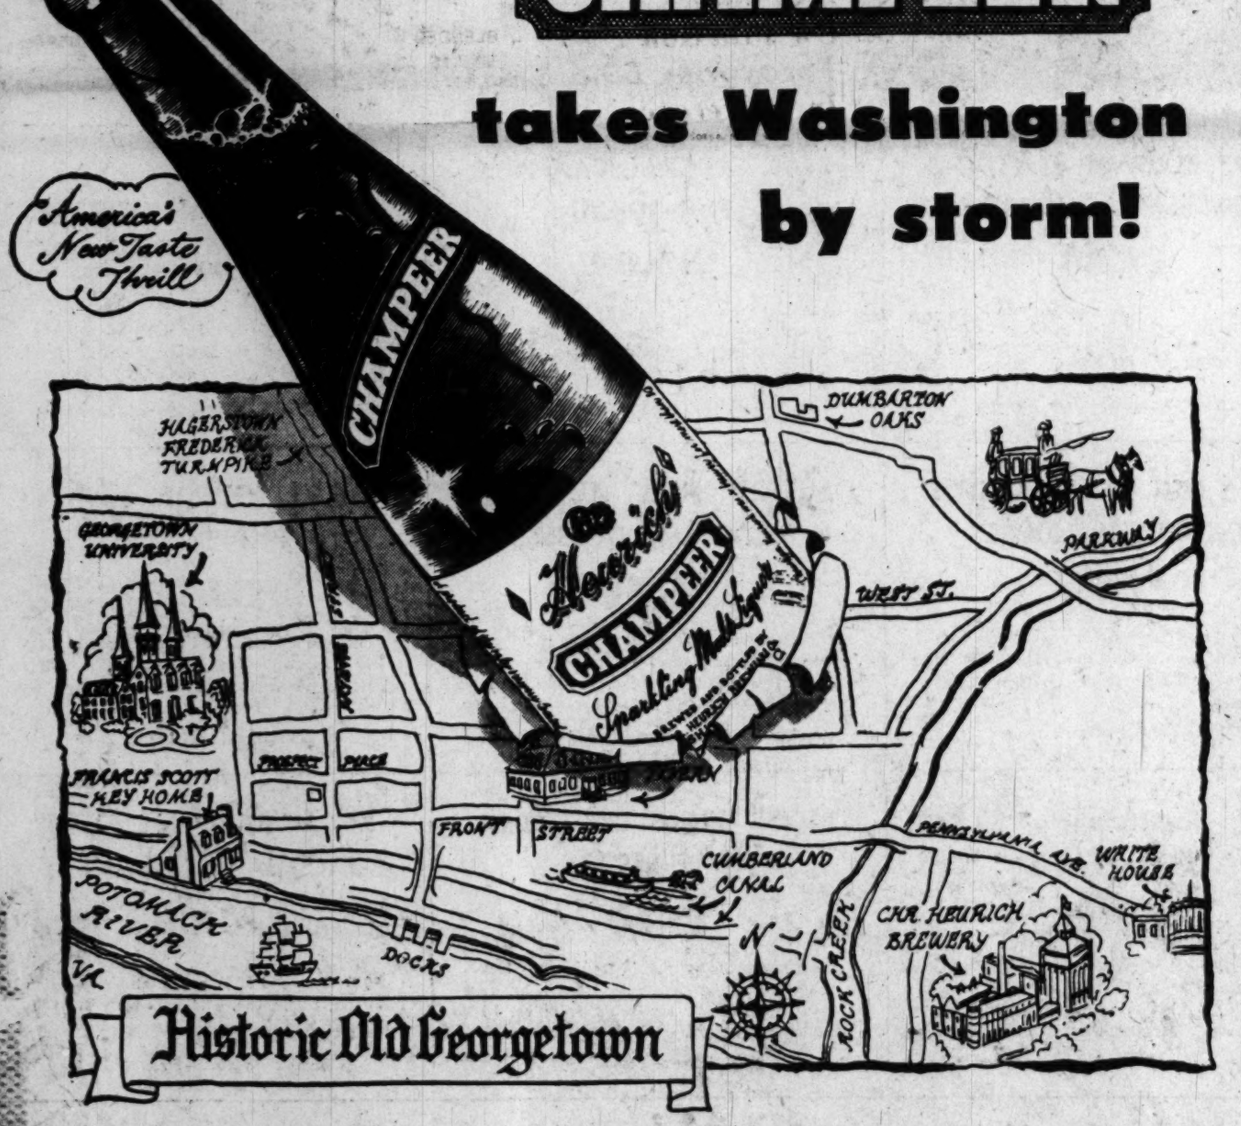
CHAMPEER
takes Washington by storm!
America's New Taste Thrill



CHANGE brings you CHAMPEER. . . . Change followed change, and brewing history was rapidly being made "down Old Georgetown way." . . . Change in top management, change in brewing equipment, change in brewing procedures.

Changes started when Christian Heurich, Jr., appointed Albert J. Bates as General Manager. Mr. Bates, formerly President of Ruppert Brewery in New York, and previously President of a successful Wisconsin brewery, promptly put his wealth of experience to work. He set up rigid new quality standards, rediscovered the grand old formula for Champeer, which was originally created by and brewed exclusively for the late Christian Heurich, Sr. Mr. Heurich called this product his champagne beer. He did not produce it commercially because he thought it too costly for commercial sale.

Mr. Bates brought change. . . . Out came old, out-moded vats; in went up-to-date steel ageing tanks. Increased facilities and modern procedures resulting from these changes brought the cost of Champeer within the reach of everyone. Truly, all-out change brings you Champeer, the champagne-like sparkling malt liquor which is capturing a nationwide market. For your own pleasure—ask for Champeer—America's new taste thrill.

2 From D. C. Die in Auto Accidents

Two Washington residents were killed in separate traffic accidents yesterday.

One victim was Mrs. Catharine Kent Brown, 58, wife of a retired Washington newspaperman, Ledyard Brown, 1657 31st st. nw. Brown was injured as their auto crashed into a parked truck near Stony Creek, Va., police reported.

Brown, also 58, was taken to the Medical College of Virginia Hospital at Richmond. Physicians there said he was cut and bruised about the head and chest, but not seriously injured.

Mrs. Brown was born at Roanoke, Va., the daughter of an old and prominent family. She was a direct descendant of Charles Wilson Peale, the noted American artist of Revolutionary days.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Sterling Ivison, of Waltham, Mass.; a brother, D'Arcy Didier, of Weston, Ohio, and a sister, Miss Angelica Didier, of Fort Worth, Tex.

She was treasurer of the board of directors of Dumbarton Court, a cooperative apartment in which she and her husband lived.

Brown was with the Washington Evening Star from 1925 until his retirement in 1944. He was a reporter for a time and later was rotogravure editor. Before 1925, he was with the Associated Press Bureau here. He is a brother of Sevellon Brown, editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal.

Burnie Oscar Love, 39, of 1208 Eastern ave. ne., was fatally injured, police said, when his automobile struck a house trailer on Route 29 seven miles north of Altavista, Va.

All four passengers in Love's car were injured, police said. His wife, Rose Lee, 27; his daughter, Shirley, 3, Irene Copeland, 743 Cresham pl. nw., and James Briggs, 28, of 718 G st. nw., were admitted to local hospitals.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Klutz does not appear today because of illness in his family.

Volunteers Opinion During Questioning In Suit Against Arlington Board

A National Education Association official declared yesterday he favored elimination of segregation in Arlington County schools if the Virginia State law did not already require segregation.

Dr. Howard A. Dawson, director of rural service for the NEA, volunteered this opinion during cross-examination in the Federal District Court, Alexandria, in a suit against the Arlington School Board by Constance Carter and others, charging racial discrimination.

Dr. Dawson, principal defense witness, later amplified the statement to reporters, remarking that Arlington residents were prepared in attitude for a changeover in the schools, and the move would save on educational expenses.

However he strongly upheld as a witness the board's contention that no discrimination is practiced in providing educational opportunities for Negro students.

Dr. Dawson and Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell, vice chairman of the school board, another defense witness, joined in praising the individual attention available to students in small schools, such as the Hoffman-Boston School for Negroes, as compared with the larger Washington-Lee High School for white students.

Dr. Dawson admitted, under cross-examination by Martin A. Martin of Richmond, that the Negro school offers fewer courses than Washington-Lee, but contended that since only 48 students were enrolled, teachers were able to give general training in various fields, with close attention to individual needs.

He stated his preference for "integration of related subjects rather than setting up a lot of labeled courses in water-tight compartments," and said this could be done effectively at Hoffman-Boston.

Dr. Dawson pointed to many inedequacies of the white high school, underlining its limited library and music rooms and the few business machines available for commercial courses.

Mrs. Campbell, a former educator, said the board had attempted conscientiously to provide equal facilities for Negroes "insofar as we could do so with the number of pupils involved."

In fact, she said, board members have been accused of showing "decided preferences" in expenditures for "the colored people of Arlington."

The final defense witness, William A. Early, Arlington superintendent of schools, explained to Judge Albert V. Bryan that courses not available in the county for Negroes often are provided at regional high schools in Manassas.

The names of Julius Brevard, 2900 20th st., and Peggy Council, 3458 22d st., both of South Arlington, were added to that of Constance Carter as plaintiffs in the case. Both asked for courses not available at Hoffman-Boston, but offered at Washington-Lee, their attorneys said.

Bawdy House Warrant Here Called Legal

Legality of an arrest warrant which resulted in the conviction of Margaret L. Seymour on a charge of keeping a bawdy house yesterday was upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Counsel for Mrs. Seymour had contended that the warrant had not been obtained upon probable cause that the law was being violated, as required by statute.

In rejecting this argument, the appellate court observed, "We think there was plenty of probable cause in what the officers who swore out the warrant had observed and partly in what other persons had told them."

The court reiterated past opinions that "probable cause exists where 'the facts and circumstances within their (officers') knowledge and of which they had reasonably trustworthy information are sufficient in themselves to warrant a man of reasonable caution in the belief that an offense has been or is being committed.'"

Mrs. Seymour was arrested last November at 1801 Calvert st. nw. During the trial a policeman related the comments of Mrs. Seymour he had heard through a stethoscope placed against a wall.

Jury Absolves Policeman in Attack Death

A rookie policeman at the Thirteenth Precinct was exonerated by a coroner's jury at an inquest yesterday into the death of a man he shot Sunday in a fight. The jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide in less than 10 minutes.

The policeman is Pvt. Harold V. Teague, who has been on the force since last March. Victim was Thornton A. Howard, 32, of 2236 11th st. nw.

Principal witnesses at the inquest were Teague, Arthur Spyies, 50, of 234 Elm st. nw., and Ralph Jackson, 1815 Corcoran st. nw.

They testified that Spyies and Jackson went to a service station at Sherman ave., and Barry pl. nw., shortly after 1 p. m., to get Jackson's car. Howard, who was a part-time attendant there, refused to give it to them until more work had been done. Howard then knocked Spyies down, testimony showed.

Spyies and Jackson crossed the street to complain to Private Teague, who was patrolling his beat and Howard followed, they said. Howard finally struck Teague, who seized Howard and began to take him to a patrol box. Later, Howard tossed the officer over his shoulder, attacked him with his own blackjack, and knocked a baton from his hand. Teague then drew his gun and fired several times, killing Howard.

Police said Howard had a record of arrests dating back to 1936.

3 White House Mantels of Arthur's Time Turn Up Here After Roundabout Search

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

For a town which makes as much history as Washington, historical relics sometimes get pretty rough treatment.

Take the case of three White House mantels. They were installed in the White House nearly a hundred years ago—in the 1840s.

They stood in the East Room of the Executive Mansion during the Mexican War, during the Lincoln period, the Civil War, the reconstruction period.

When President Chester A. Arthur came along and remodeled things, they were carted out and sold as junk.

Now they have turned up again, roughly 70 years later. One is under a porch in Southwest Washington. Another, also dismantled, is in the possession of a Washington architect. A third has been put in place in a Washington house.

Two Found at Oak Hill

The Washington Post got on the track of these mantels last week when Mrs. Mary R. Hardy of 6413 Edmonston ave., East Riverdale, Md., telephoned the city desk after reading of the discovery of two original White House mantels at Oak Hill, Va.

The story reported that about a dozen White House mantels were still missing, and would be needed for the restored building.

"Well," said Mrs. Hardy, "I think I know where two of those mantels are."

Back about 1910, Mrs. Hardy, who is now in her eighties, had visited a home down near the 7th st. wharf, she said. She didn't remember the address, although she thought it was on B st. But she could tell us how to get there.

"You go down 7th st., and under the bridge, and then on 7th for two blocks, then turn right, and right again, and it is a large house near the corner."

Recalls Family Name

One other thing she remembered: The name of the family which lived in the house was Craycroft. In the Craycroft home she had seen two mantels, one in the salon to the left of the center hall, another in the dining room. These mantels, she had been told, had come from the White House. She remembered them as lovely marble pieces.

Other things she remembered about the Craycroft family were that Mrs. Craycroft had died within a few years after her 1910 visit, and that Mrs. Craycroft had a daughter, who had later married. She didn't remember first names of either.

With this as a starter, a reporter checked back to a 1910 City Directory. A Benjamin F. Craycroft was listed as living at 200 8th st. sw.

Back to the office. A check with Public Buildings Administration.

Nobody Told Us

"Did you by any chance know you may have disposed of some White House mantels when you tore down the 200 8th st. sw. house?"

"Nobody told us," said PBA, and looked quickly to see who had wrecked the 8th st. house

Hechinger's got the contract, in 1942, PBA informed us.

Hechinger's, in the person of Frank Wolfsheimer, engineer, remembered wrecking a number of houses in that area, and taking out a number of mantelpieces, many of which were still crated in Hechinger's warehouse, labeled with their house numbers.

But there was another clew—the married daughter of Mrs. Craycroft. Perhaps she knew what happened to the mantels. District Court marriage license records from 1910 to 1920 were checked. Only one Craycroft was listed during the period: J. Celeste Craycroft, who on June 15, 1913, married Joseph I. Howe of New York. Thence to the Bureau of Vital Statistics, which reported Mrs. Jennie C. Craycroft of 200 8th st. sw. died on August 12, 1912.

Sold Twice, Condemned

Checks at the District Real Estate division of land records at 200 8th st. nw. revealed the property had been sold by Mrs. Craycroft in 1911 to John A. Barnes, who sold it in 1916 to Louis A. Johnson. The latter owned it until 1942, when the Government obtained it by condemnation proceedings.

Another call to PBA, this time to get the address of Louis A. Johnson.

PBA reported that he had since died, that his heirs were Mrs. Irene S. Johnson and Isabel N. Johnson, now living at 208 8th st. sw.

And PBA also reported that the Johnsons had reserved three mantelpieces when their house had been wrecked.

Another quick visit to Southwest Washington. This time, a successful one.

Mrs. Johnson reported yes, she did know something about those mantelpieces.

The house at 200 8th st. sw. had been built in the 1880's, and originally was occupied by a Unitarian minister. Three mantelpieces were placed in the house at the time it was built.

The neighborhood heard that those mantelpieces had been thrown out of the White House when President Chester Arthur ordered his extensive remodeling. They had been sold as junk to a local dealer, who in turn had sold them to the Unitarian minister, who had installed them in his new house.

When the Governmnet decided to widen B st. and rename it Independence ave., it had to take ground from 200 8th st. sw. The house had to go, but PBA gave the Johnsons permission to remove the mantels.

Now, two of the mantels have been sold, one to a local architect, another to a Washington woman who has had it put in place in her home. The third of the mantels, which are identical, is dismantled, and is under the porch of the Johnson home at 208 8th st. sw. Mrs. Johnson did not identify the architect nor the woman who owns two of the pieces.

Mrs. Johnson said her daughter hopes some day to build a house big enough to accommodate the mantels.

And so the search which started with Mrs. Hardy's memory was ended. One thing remained—to verify the fact that the mantels indeed had been in the White House.

Clinched by Pictures

Yesterday, using pictures the Johnsons had taken of one of the mantels, the Post was able to do this.

White House Architect Lorenzo Winslow called the mantel "one of the finest" he had seen of its kind. He said very similar mantels still stand in the President's study, and the bedrooms of Mrs. Truman and Margaret.

He believes the "found" mantels were in the East Room, and probably stood there from about 1840 until they were removed by President Arthur.

Unfortunately, however, the 8th st. mantels are of the post-Federal period, still with some classic features, but lacking the straight shelf, pilaster support of the Georgian period.

"Very interesting," said Winslow. "But I don't think we want them back. If you find any more, I'd be glad to look at them."

Art Treasures Unloaded at Navy Yard

The bulk of the Austrian-owned art treasures that arrived aboard a Navy vessel at the Naval Gun Factory Sunday, were gingerly transferred to the National Gallery of Art yesterday.

The collection of paintings by old masters, sculpture, tapestries and other objects of art—with a total value of eighty million dollars, according to Dr. Ernest H. Buschbeck of Vienna, a curator traveling with the collection—will be placed on exhibit at the national gallery November 20 for two months.

Plenty of Protection

The crated treasures were removed from the storeship, USS Malabar, by stevedores and sailors, and transferred to the gallery in vans on which rode armed marines and sailors. They were escorted by Washington police.

The sailors and stevedores were briefed by Commander Keith Merrill, in charge of transportation, and Dr. Buschbeck before the moving job was started.

The Austrian Minister, Dr. Ludwig Kleinwaechter, Rear Admiral Frank G. Fahrion, superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory, David E. Finley, director of the National Gallery, and other officials were on hand for the unloading.

Brought From England

The last few crates are to be removed this morning, following which the Malabar, will sail for Norfolk, Va. The Malabar brought the collection from England, where the greater part of it has been on exhibit at the Tate Gallery, London.

Macgill James, assistant director of the gallery, said uncrating will probably start Wednesday.

Red Feather Drive Enters Homes Today

Their efforts for the Community Chest supplement those of the more than 1000 workers of the campaign's Business Unit II, who began solicitation of 18,000 business and professional offices in the Washington area yesterday.

Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, chairman for the second year of the Residential Committee, said the home solicitors will be "in touch with many housewives who, deeply interested in the Chest agencies, will wish to make donations either from their private income or from housekeeping allowance."

Mrs. Wedel said the residential workers will try to get as wide a coverage as possible by the time of the first General Report Luncheon, in the Hotel Washington, at 12:30 p. m. Monday.

Awards to outstanding individuals and teams will be announced at the Residential Rally at 12:30 p. m. Tuesday in the Hotel Mayflower. Mrs. Harold H. Burton, chairman of the rally luncheon, will introduce the speakers—Miss Helen E. Hokinson, cartoonist from New York, and Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post. Wives of Cabinet members and Supreme Court justices and women leaders in journalism, radio and television will be among the guests.

In Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax counties in Virginia, and Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in Maryland, door-to-door appeals are also being made under the Community Chest campaign committees in those areas.

Governor William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland, will address 300 workers in the Montgomery County Chest campaign at 6:30 p. m. today at the Congressional Country Club.

Alexandria campaign workers will hold their opening rally at 8 p. m. today in the Jefferson School annex, 1400 Cameron st.

The significance of the 1950 Red Feather campaign is being brought to the attention of medical men in letters from the Physicians Advisory Committee. Similar letters are being sent to real estate men by Frank J. Luchs, general chairman of the campaign. Letters are also to be sent to dentists over the signature of a group of leaders in that field.

Landlord's Complaint Stirs Ruckus

A landlord who called on District Commissioner John Russell Young with a complaint that an electric refrigerator he had bought was giving off sulphuric acid fumes charged yesterday that he was made the object of sulphuric language on the part of Charles Stofberg, special assistant to the commissioner.

In addition, the landlord, Thurston Weaver, 41, of 3112 Old Dominion rd., Alexandria, told Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King and Assistant United States Attorney Martin J. McNamara that Stofberg gave him such a jolt in the small of the back that he was propelled 10 feet toward the exit in Young's anteroom.

King declined to handle the case on the grounds that if Weaver had a case at all it was an assault case and within the province of McNamera. MacNamera had Stofberg and others before him at a hearing, then refused to prosecute with the comment that Weaver had "no case."

Stofberg told reporters Weaver had shaken a finger under the nose of a woman secretary and raised his voice. At this point, Stofberg said he put his hand on Weaver's shoulder and led him from the office.

Weaver said he had bought the refrigerator for a tenant and, when it appeared to be giving off fumes, he decided to seek help from the District Government in having it tested for any defect.

After the hearing, Stofberg offered to drive Weaver to the District building and also offered to look into the refrigerator case personally. Weaver declined the aid.

Hawes Leaves $134,000 Estate

'Hill' Theft Reported

Court Sets Back Fay Bid to Yank Gaming Phones

Judge Morris Says Regulations for Removals Must Be Clarified First

By John London
Post Reporter

Efforts of United States Attorney George Morris Fay to remove some 300 phones of alleged gamblers fouled on a new snag yesterday in District Court.

Judge James W. Morris found the amended tariff regulations of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone co., which were filed with the Public Utilities Commission and which authorizes such removal, are ambiguous.

He suspended court proceedings involving the planned removal of the phone of Harry Katz at 3169 Walbridge pl. nw. for 10 days to allow time for "clarification" of the tariff.

When "clarified" (presumably by being rewritten or officially interpreted by the PUC) the regulations should clearly indicate the phone subscriber should receive notice of intended removal and the right of a fair hearing, Judge Morris said.

Filed in March

The regulation involved was filed with PUC by the phone company on March 18 and became effective April 18. It embodies what had been company practice since 1934 and reads:

"The service is furnished subject to the condition that it will not be used for an unlawful purpose. Service will not be furnished if any law enforcement agency, acting within its jurisdiction, advises that such service is being used or will be used in violation of law, or if the telephone company receives other evidence that such service is being or will be so used."

Katz in proceedings before the PUC, attacked this regulation as "arbitrary and capricious," a denial of due process of law, a denial of free speech and charged it takes away the right to sue the company for wrongful removal. He also charged it fails to provide for due notice and an opportunity for a fair hearing.

Regulation Upheld

The PUC upheld the regulation, stating a subscriber could in proceedings before PUC question the company as to whether it had probable cause for removal. However, PUC modified the regulation to include a requirement that the phone company notify the subscriber whose phone is to be removed. The amendment reads:

". . . the company shall give notice to each subscriber or prospective subscriber affected . . . of his right to apply to the Public Utilities Commission . . . for a determination of the applicability of the tariff provisions."

Katz appealed the PUC decision to District Court. Judge Morris yesterday found the last 10 words of the amendment ambiguous. He said it might mean all the subscriber is entitled to is proof the United States Attorney requested the phone company to remove the phone.

"To act merely on such a request is unthinkable and inconsistent with our notions of government," Judge Morris said.

"A Novel Idea"

"It's a novel idea to me that all enforcement officers who are not permitted to prosecute without indictment by a grand jury can merely by requesting bring about the loss of a telephone without any evidence."

Judge Morris said that lawyers or the PUC, the phone company and Katz all appeared to agree the amendment should mean a guarantee of notice and a full hearing when the burden of proving a prima facie case of illegal use would be on the company or United States Attorney, not the subscriber. Therefore, he advised all parties to meet within 10 days and "clarify" the regulation and its amendment accordingly.

Among attorneys present were Lloyd Harrison for the PUC, Edmund L. Jones for the phone company and John L. Ingoldsby for Katz.

Business Slumps

Guest House Group Asks More Curbs

The Washington Guest House Association said yesterday that the "bottom has dropped out of the rooming-house business" and then called for the end of wartime emergency measures which allowed homes in restricted neighborhoods to take in up to four roomers.

Paul J. Miller, president of the association, told the District Zoning Commission there are 16,000 vacant beds in District rooming houses.

"Every other rooming house has a 'vacancy' sign in the window," he said.

An association study shows there are 7945 rooming houses in the city but only 5000 pay licensing fees and are subject to inspection.

Homes All Over Changed

Dwellings all over the city have changed from private homes taking in one person to rooming houses with a majority of space rented out, Miller said. In many cases owners have failed to obtain licenses.

He told the commission it is time for the city to return to its zoning plan, which limited to two the number of persons who could rent rooms in dwellings in restricted districts.

The regulation permitting up to four roomers expires October 31. The commission is considering a proposal to extend it to October 1, 1950.

Miss Frances McKusick, 1416 Longfellow st. nw., testified there is a shortage of single-room accommodations in downtown rooming houses and said if the regulation is extended many persons living in single rooms in outlying areas will be forced to move downtown and double up.

A proposal to modify zoning regulations to ease requirements for off-street parking facilities was opposed by the Forest Hills Citizens Association at the hearings.

Objects to Amendments

Joseph Sanders, chairman of the association's zoning committee, said that if proposed amendments to the zoning law are adopted builders will be able to use topography as an excuse for not providing parking space.

Sanders also objected to a request to rezone property on the southeast corner of Connecticut ave. and Ellicott st. nw. to permit construction of an apartment building.

Attorney S. R. Carter, representing seven home owners in the area of Ridge rd., G st. and Alabama ave. se., opposed rezoning of an adjoining section of land to permit construction of semi-detached houses. He also presented a petition signed by 40 other residents who own detached houses, protesting rezoning.

The residents said area schools and transportation facilities already are overtaxed and the new housing would depreciate their property.

The commission took all of the cases under advisement.

Correction

A story in The Washington Post yesterday concerning the Sunday breakfast of the District Democratic Club erroneously mentioned Elijah Stewart, vice president of the local Young Democrats, as Democratic candidate for Representative in the Seventh Congressional District of Oklahoma.

Stewart will be a candidate for party nomination in that district in the July primary. The incumbent, Democratic Representative Victor Wickersham, who has served in the Seventy-seventh, Seventy-eighth, Seventy-ninth and Eighty-first Congresses, will also be a candidate, his office said yesterday. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Seckinger Seen No. 1 In Health Job Race

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer of the District, last night appeared the leading candidate for early appointment as District health officer.

His name was one of three submitted to the Commissioners yesterday by a city-wide health officer selection committee after a month's study of available public health men throughout the country.

The other recommendations for the top District health position, according to an authoritative District Building source, were:

Dr. Vlado A. Getting, a Johns Hopkins and Harvard Medical School graduate, now Massachusetts commissioner of health, and Dr. Erwin C. Sage, assistant health officer of San Francisco, Calif.

Given "Very Good Chance"

But a well-informed District official last night said he believed Dr. Seckinger stood a "very good chance" of being the Commissioners' final selection for the post, now that he has become one of three best choices in the eyes of the selection committee, named last month by Commissioner Guy Mason.

Dr. Seckinger, who is 55, already has the backing of Dr. George C. Ruhland who retired last month.

The list of three names was sent to Mason who has been at home ill the past two weeks.

Mason later informed his fellow Commissioners that he wanted two or three days to study the candidates' qualifications. Final selection is expected within a week.

Dr. Seckinger, who has been acting District health officer the past month, said yesterday that he has informed the Commissioners "he would accept the job if offered it." It pays $10,300 but the Health Department has requested that the position carry a $14,500 salary. The boost is contained in the 1951 budget request.

Came Here in 1935

Dr. Seckinger came to Washington in 1935 after working in public health in Savannah, Ga., and with the State health department in Georgia as an epidemiologist.

The past year and a half, he has been acting superintendent of Gallinger Hospital and coordinator of District hospitals.

Reached at a medical convention in New York last night, Dr. Getting said: "I told the selection committee that I could not accept the position unless the salary was $14,500 and unless I would have authority to reorganize the Health Department into an efficient setup."

He added that he would also want assurances that "future appointments within the District Health Department could be based on merit rather than considerations of race, color and creed."

Dr. Sage, a former naval medical officer, could not be reached for comment last night.

Three Victims

Thief Orders 'Boloney,' but Takes Money

Police were looking yesterday for a tall, lanky "boloney bandit" who held up three food shops Sunday night. He escaped with nearly $200.

At the West End Delicatessen, 2007 M st. nw., he thrust a gun at Albert B. Steerman, proprietor, threatened to "blow you in two" and obtained $110. Two boys, Milton McDonald, 7, of 2018 M st., and James Johnson, 11, of 1150 20th st. nw., were in the place. Police said the bandit boarded a bus after the robbery.

Three hours later a man answering the same description entered the grocery of Moses Goldberg, 2032 12th st. nw., and ordered bologna, bread, and grape pop. Then he thrust his hand in his pocket and demanded money. Goldberg yielded a $1 bill and $1 in change. The bandit left with the bologna.

Then, in 45 minutes, he appeared at the grocery of Mrs. Vasilike Garoufes, 2535 14th st. nw., again asking for bologna. He repeated the menacing left-hand-in-pocket routine, and obtained $60—and bologna.

Police said he was a Negro, about 25, and more than 6 feet tall.

When they neared Kensington, he said the passenger drew a gun and demanded his money. James grabbed for the gun, which went off, the bullet creasing his scalp. The fare then fled with the cab, he said. James was treated at Georgetown University Hospital. The cab was recovered in Bethesda, Md.

'Light Assault' Indictments Jam District Court Calendar

The District grand jury was urged yesterday by Judge Alexander Holtzoff to stop returning assault with a dangerous weapon indictments in cases where the victim's injuries are slight.

The District Court judge told the jurors they might refer such cases to Municipal Court for prosecution as misdemeanors of simple assault and carrying deadly weapons.

Holtzoff made it clear he was referring particularly to cases where instruments such as knives are the weapons used and not to firearms.

It's Up to Grand Jury

Municipal Court can give up to a year for both assault and carrying weapons.

Judge Holtzoff pointed out, however, that the decision as to how to handle these cases continues to rest with the grand jury and not with the judges.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

The idea of "self-service" seems to be the coming thing. One of the most popular eating-places in town is a new cafeteria that just opened here. I had lunch there the other day and was amazed how many people were served in the short time I was there.

It reminded me of another kind of service most of us use today—party-line telephone service. I was talking with Cy Stubbs, who works for the telephone company, and he told me if it weren't for party lines, thousands of folks would still be waiting for telephone service. He said that party lines mean more service for more people sooner. That's one reason why it's so important that folks continue to use their party lines "sharingly."

UN Ideals, Achievements Lauded on Capital's Anniversary Programs

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

THAT FABULOUS 4-year-old baby, the United Nations, was the discussion all over the United States yesterday. The Woman's National Democratic Club saluted the U. N. at a luncheon meeting, heard the international organization lauded by the first woman Treasurer of the United States, Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark.

Mrs. Clark said that too often average citizens believe that the United Nations organization is too complicated to understand except by the students of foreign affairs.

"We don't have to follow the day-by-day happenings of the international organization," Mrs. Clark said, but urged that every American citizen keep in mind the aims and goals of the United Nations.

Know something about the 13 world organizations tied up in the U. N., the "wings of the United Nations structure," Mrs. Clark advised. She spoke of UNESCO, whose purpose is eliminating illiteracy all over the world; the World Health Organization, which successfully fought the cholera plague in Egypt; the International Refugee Organization, that placed 374,000 refugees back in their own countries, or in one of 70 other countries in one year; the Farm and Agriculture Organization, that shows farmers all over the world how to get more out of the soil, and fishermen how to get more from the sea.

Mrs. Charles B. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who introduced the guest speaker, reminded club members that the official United States copy of the U. N. Charter would be on display at the National Archives Building. The exhibit of international agreements opened yesterday with a reception and will be continued daily for several weeks.

Dean Kayser Praises U. N.

THE UNITED NATIONS also received orchids from another quarter yesterday.

Dean Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of university students at George Washington University, termed the international organization "startlingly successful" in affording the nations of the world a forum in which they could air their grievances and state their aspirations.

Dean Kayser was guest speaker at the University Women's Club tea and reception yesterday celebrating the fourth anniversary of the signing of the United Nations Charter.

"If it has been charged that force as a disciplinary agent is lacking," Dean Kayser said, "it must be remembered that the United Nations has kept the ways of communication open so as to render less necessary the need for force."

About 200 members and guests of the Women's University Club dropped in at the U. N. tea.

Federation Hits Bread Softeners

THE D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday adopted an emergency resolution opposing "bread softeners" in bread and rolls.

Bread softeners, as defined by Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, member of the federation's legislative committee, are synthetic chemicals or "mono and diglyceride" concentrates, manufactured from coal tar and petroleum. Their use in breads eliminates most if not all shortening. Sometimes the chemical emulsifiers also are used as substitutes for milk and eggs.

Mrs. Howard, who introduced the resolution in the absence of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, legislative chairman, pointed out that the bread softeners are considered injurious to health by some doctors.

Actually the resolution calls for a definition of the standards of bread as well as objecting to synthetic ingredients. It reads "That no nonnutrive ingredients, preservatives or substitutes shall be added to any food products, including bread, until they have first been certified by the Food and Drug Administration as noninjurious for further consumption . . . that no ingredients, preservatives or substitutes be substituted in whole or in part for natural food elements."

Mrs. William H. Hessick, jr., president, Washington Chapter, National Society of Arts and Letters, gave a brief talk on the federation's program celebrating the United Nations' fourth anniversary. She was introduced by Miss Cornelia Hill, chairman of the International Relations Department.

During the morning session Miss Martha Strayer of the Washington Daily News gave highlights of a recent trip to Finland.

Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, president, told the some 175 women present that she had been named chairman of the Women's Division, March of Dimes Campaign.

Others reporting at the club's opening meeting of the season, held at the Hamilton Hotel, were Mrs. Frank J. Mulkern, club extension chairman, and Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, finance and budget chairman, who announced final plans for the club's annual benefit, November 17 at Hotel 2400.

Press Honors Mrs. Cowles, Mrs. Miller

SOME 200 men and women journalists, plus a sprinkling of residential society, turned out at the Women's National Press Club's luncheon yesterday. The gala event, held at the Statler Hotel, honored Fleur Cowles, associate editor of Look Magazine, and Mrs. Peter Miller, publisher of the Times-Herald.

Fleur—Mrs. Gardiner Cowles—outlined plans for Flair, a new magazine of which she is editor. Flair will make its debut on Mrs. Cowles' birthday—January 20.

In greeting the club, Mrs. Miller remarked, "The Fourth Estate is the most important job for women today."

She said that members of the Fourth Estate take their responsibilities seriously, one of which is to preserve our Constitution. As Mrs. Miller sees it, the press as a whole acts as a check on our Constitution.

Tells of French Women's Role

"FRENCH women's participation in politics is having a moralizing effect," says Count Nicholas de Rochefort. The Count, a Georgetown University professor, made his observation last night in a United Nations Day address before the D. C. Business and Professional Women's Club.

French women always have supported wholeheartedly all movements aimed to prevent wars and to promote international security, he said. Presently they work for the United Nations, and for the West-European Union. However, he pointed out that the Union itself is only a step toward the formation of the "Commonwealth of Atlantic Democratic Nations of Christian Civilization."

Mrs. Dorothy Porto, chairman of the club's international relations committee, presided over the meeting which ended a week's observance of United Nations Week.

About Color Scheme for Walls

We are painting the interior of our house and really need some help to decide what color to use on walls in the living and dining rooms. The walls are now cream. My sofa is maroon, one chair gold, the other green tapestry. The rug is an American Oriental with various colors. The one room is 10 by 13, the other is slightly smaller with a large connecting arch. Also, what color drapes should be used? E. A.

With maroon, gold and green, your walls would be lovely in soft dusty rose or a pale green. A cool, light color such as the pale green will give the room an airy, spacious appearance.

If the upholstery in the sofa and chairs is without figure, the drapes could be a floral design or stripe, using green and maroon as the predominating colors and gold as an accent. If, however, you have a figure in any of the upholstery, I would suggest plain drapes, the same color as the walls, but a shade or two darker.

Do you know of any place where I could buy lamp shade frames to cover? H. P. R.

There is a firm on F st. which sells wire frames in all sizes and can order frames in special sizes which they do not have in stock. In addition, they sell materials for covering frames. The store can be reached by calling EXecutive 0943.

Bishop-Bracken

You published a hint on rolling and soaking newspapers for use in a fireplace a short time ago. Somewhere I've seen that certain chemicals can be added to the water which will produce colored flames when the "logs" are burned. Do you know what these chemicals are? I believe one was just plain soda, or maybe washing soda. K. M.

To answer this question I would like to quote from a letter which P. J. C., one of our readers, wrote us last spring in regard to the use of chemicals in water to produce colored flames. He said that when the chemicals were added to the water "it was the most caustic stuff I ever handled. When the 'logs' were soaked in it 24 hours it dissolved steel wires which I used to tie the rolls together. Also, it ate holes where the enamel was chipped off in the enamel kettle in which the solution was made."

So, in view of P. J. C's experience I'd suggest you use one of the commercial products on the market for colored flames instead of attempting to produce them yourself. These products come in cake and powdered form and can be purchased in department and hardware stores where fireplace accessories are sold.

Sometime ago in a paper or magazine I saw instructions for making gloves from chamois skin. Can you tell me where I might find the pattern? J. G. P.

Dominican Party Honors Trujillo

Reception Celebrates UN Birthday

U. N. celebrated its fourth Charter anniversary yesterday, and Gen. Rafael Trujillo, president of the Dominican Republic, celebrated his birthday anniversary. Both events were marked in Washington at receptions attended by diplomats and officials.

Representatives of the 59 member countries of the United Nations were received by Arthur Sweetser, director of the Washington Information Center of the UN, and Mrs. Sweetser, at the World Affairs Center from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock, and from 6 to 8 the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen received in the embassy drawing room.

A toast in champagne to President Trujillo was proposed by the Ambassador. Gratitude was expressed for the prosperity of the little island country, which today is one of the most affluent in Latin America.

Yesterday was also the anniversary of the blue white and red Dominican flag which draped a portrait of President Trujillo at the Embassy reception. Among those attending the colorful event were members of the embassy staff and their wives, Senora Argentina Copello, Dr. and Mrs. William Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dudley, and Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

The buffet supper which followed cocktails included a special Dominican chicken and rice dish, baked hams, salads and cakes and ices.

In the U. N. gathering at the World Affairs Center were the Netherlands Ambassador, E. N. van Kleffens; the Ambassador of Canada and Mrs. Hume Wrong, the Ambassador of Iran, Hussein Ala; the Ambassador of Israel, Eliahu Elath; Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Daniels, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Anatole Visson, Mr. and Mrs. Riffat Tirana, Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris.

Another party celebrating President Trujillo's anniversary was given last evening by the Dominican Ambassador to OAS and Senora de Salazar. The latter is a niece of General Trujillo, and her house on Massachusetts ave. was at one time the residence of the general's daughter, the former Senorita Flor Trujillo.

Homemaking Hints . . .

If you have a north window in your living room and cold air constantly seeps through despite the weather stripping, by all means have a storm window built for it. It will mean real comfort in the room and less fuel burned to maintain comfort.

If the draperies look faded and shabby now they are hung, why not give them a dip in a dye bath of a deeper shade and have practically new draperies? Wash them first to remove the dirt and then follow directions of any reliable dye.

Sex Hormone 'Shots' Called Fad, Not Need

By Glen R. Shepherd, M.D.

THE sex hormones have been much misunderstood, overemphasized, and the need for their use in middle-aged people much exaggerated.

Many women in their 40's demand weekly "shots" as their personal crutch and a social necessity because all the other girls are also getting shots. Some men in their 50's and older regard male hormone "shots" as the Fountain of Youth, especially since a popular book on that subject several years ago contained wonderful and appealing claims for them.

Hormone shots are easy to take, but Dr. Shepherd advises against indiscriminate use of such injections as a supposed means of prolonging youth in middle-aged men and women

Recent methods for studying the amount of sex hormones produced in each person have given doctors a chance to check on the real need, if any, for using them as treatment during the change of life. These studies show that most older people have enough of the sex hormones. Thus, "shots" are much less often needed than you think. But, as usual, this information hasn't yet been spread around as widely as the older idea that all women and many men need "shots" to remain in mental health and physical vigor during their middle age.

While there are a few men and women who benefit from treatment with sex hormones, the simple truth is that most people don't need them. The bewildering symptoms which many women have in their 40's during the so-called change of life or menopause usually can be relieved by other treatments as we shall see in another article. Although the use of sex hormones is not dangerous in the hands of doctors, who will observe certain precautions, they are expensive and are often used now because the woman patient insists that her doctor give her those wonderful "shots."

Other uses for the sex hormones, than simply using them as replacement treatment in people who don't make enough themselves, are their administration in the treatment of certain kinds of cancer. Cancers of the breast in women and the prostate in men seem to be stimulated when additional hormone of the same sex is given and are often held in check when the opposite sex hormone is used. That is, if a woman with cancer of the breast is given testosterone, the male hormone, the cancerous tissue becomes smaller and less active. If the glands producing testosterone in a man with cancer of the prostate are removed by castration and he is given female sex hormone, his prostate cancer often becomes smaller and its colonies in other organs may disappear completely. Usually the use of hormones is simply one part of the treatment of certain cancers. It is a new kind of treatment and is still being watched with great interest, especially since cancer has not been found to result from the use of sex hormones in treatment of other conditions, despite their effect upon certain cancers which have already developed.

AS MUCH IN VOGUE AS IT WAS FIFTY YEARS AGO

Mounting styles may come and go - but the round prong setting goes on forever. The reason is that all interest is centered on the diamond itself - that the brilliance of the stone is emphasized. Our modern version of this setting is four prongs - rather than the original six. Since the tips are hardly discernible, the diamond seems to float on the finger. Two outstanding examples are in the rings shown above.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother Thinks It Prudent to Humor Son's Wish to Smoke and Drink Beer at Home, But Father Is Offended by Her Liberal Attitude

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you be so kind as to settle a difference between my husband and myself regarding our son who will soon be 16? The dispute concerns smoking and drinking beer.

Although it appears that nearly all the high school age boys and girls in our community smoke, we had held back from giving our son permission to smoke. But one night he definitely asked our permission to smoke at home and honestly admitted that he had been smoking on the outside.

There was quite a bit of hurt and argument when we heard this, but in the end—and against my husband's wishes, despite his knowing Phil was smoking elsewhere—I gave in to the boy's request, because of his honesty, and now he smokes at home.

Father Retired to Bed in Huff

TONIGHT my son asked for a glass of beer and his father refused him, yet Phil admitted that once in a while he drinks a bottle of beer outside. And since in this, too, he came home and told us of his actions, I said that he could have one glass but I didn't want to hear of his ever indulging too much, as he is too young.

In disapproval my husband rose from his chair and retired for the night, and when I tried to reason things out with him he wouldn't talk and became really peeved. Which of us is wrong? I earnestly want to please my husband and my son, too, and personally I don't approve of teen-agers smoking and drinking, but when all seem to indulge, how can a few parents hold their children in check?

Just last week my husband and I attended a school picnic where all the boys and girls of Phil's age were drinking beer and dancing. Our son met a girl there, they danced and when I bumped into them unexpectedly they were drinking cokes, so I don't think he goes out of bounds, as we both try to teach him the good and bad of things. We shall abide by your kind advice and if I am wrong I want to be corrected. K. R.

Wading Into a Touchy Subject

DEAR K. R.: Ordinarily it is a thankless risk to venture an opinion (even when asked) about smoking or drinking, because these are touchy subjects, due to the fact that the majority of abstainers tend to be vehemently emotional in condemning such use of nicotine and alcohol.

Those opposed are strongly of the opinion that the dangers to health and self-control inherent in smoking and drinking are so obvious that it doesn't make sense to entertain dissenting ideas or a compromise platform, or to humor self-indulgent inclinations on the part of anyone—but youth most particularly.

Which is preliminary to saying that in this discussion I'm not going into the medical and moral hygiene aspects of the proposition, because I figure the individual who is open to teaching on that score will turn to his doctor, minister and school educators for it. And in all probability he will receive a variety of cautiously worded views; and in the summing up will have to develop his own stand "against," if it is to represent his true conviction and become a constructive example to others.

Father Is Bigger Problem Than Son

AND SPEAKING of example, it is indeed a potent influence in molding habits; and for this reason conscientious parents begin early to try to provide their children with the standards they want them to live by. This they do by trying to perfect their own example, by overcoming any faults they wouldn't want the children to copy; and also by doing their utmost to give the child access to constructive associates,—i. e., praiseworthy neighbors, friends and playmates.

As you say, where parental wishes run contrary to the general practice, it is seldom possible to restrain youth from experimenting,—unless, of course, the parents' behavior is so fine, and so shines by contrast to mass example, that children follow it without need of salestalk. And I gather that Phil's father isn't a beacon light on that score, and that smoking and beer drinking are habits of his at home (and elsewhere).

The significant problem here isn't Phil's dabbling with smoking and drinking, although I grant these are foolish false gestures at being grown up,—but rather the father's unconscious jealousy of his son's symbolic attempts to assert manhood, which makes papa also jealous of your troubled sympathy with the lad's precarious striving. If your husband can get wise to himself and act really mature in unity with you, as regards the boy's floundering, all will be safer and happier. M. H.

Brazil's Leading Woman of Letters

Carolina Nabuco Charming Addition To Diplomatic Set; Veep Gets Call About Those Kissing Photographs

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

WELCOME to Washington's diplomatic circles is Miss Carolina Nabuco, recently arrived to act as hostess to her brother, the Brazilian Ambassador. Washington is no new story to Miss Nabuco who lived here as a girl, when her father was the first Brazilian Ambassador to the U. S.

The Ambassador's sister, who is even more charming than her brother, is Brazil's most distinguished woman of letters. She is the author of a number of novels and of the biography of her father Joachim Nabuco, whose centenary was celebrated with such pomp and circumstance in Brazil last summer.

Miss Nabuco's novel "A Successor," a local best seller, achieved international attention as basis of a plagiarism suit against Daphne du Maurier and her popular book "Rebecca."

After publication in Portugese, "Successor" was translated into English by the authoress and dispatched to a British literary agent. There the manuscript remained unheeded for five years. Then Miss du Maurier's book appeared.

Miss Nabuco's theory is that the British authoress read the manuscript, did not realize it had been published already and appropriated the material. Miss Nabuco liked the movie "Rebecca" and, oddly enough, was not angry about it—but pleased when Brazilians, after seeing the film, said they had "seen" her book.

Miss Nabuco's latest novel "Flame and Ashes" won the Brazilian Academy of Letters 1948 award for the best novel. It's called the Coelho Neto prize.

THERE'S no doubt about it—from now on there won't be as many photographs of the Vice President kissing. Here's the reason. A few days ago Mrs. Carleton Hadley gave him a buzz from St. Louis to recount the following incident:—stepping from the elevator in the office building where she works, one of St. Paul's most prominent business men grabbed and gave her a hearty buss. Mrs. H. recoiled in mild surprise, asked to what she owed this pleasant honor?

The St. Louisian replied, practically every day I see in the papers pictures of the Veep kissing Gloria Swanson or some other attractive girl, and so I thought you rated similar attention!

Hearing this, the Vice President asided to adjacent pals "Well, if it's going to get to this—I guess I'll have to do my kissing in executive session!"

Well, anyway, we'll see!

Flaunted Falsies

JUST a very few years ago the expression "falsies"—if known at all—was considered too vulgar to breathe in even the less conservative circles. But now, due to a delighted press, it's practically a household expression and, for all we know, has been included in up-to-date dictionaries. Just the other day, in The Washington Post of all places, a small but salty United Press dispatch quoted the displeasure of a Chicago foundation-garment official against Hollywood's AFL (Anti-Falsies League). Emboldened by such sanction this dept. dares pass an item of sensational news relayed by a casual West Coast visitor.

"It's this way when you get to California," he said, inhaling a deep, reflective swig of Scotch. "First you leave off your coat, next your tie goes, then it's only a matter of weeks before you're wearing one of those low-neck, flapping-tail shirts. "We waited expectantly for the denouement. "But oddly enough there's a lot of business done in California. And men tend to look pretty pansyish with Adam's apple and collarbones exposed." Here he hoisted his feet from floor to sofa in relaxed Beverly Hills style, took firmer stance on glass.

"So in order to look more virile, more forceful, some smart guy figured out a new angle. (We were on tenterhooks). "It's a chest toupee" he continued calmly. "A what?" "A chest toupee. It's made of flesh-colored plastic stuff and is sort of glued on underneath the arms.

One on the Aisle—

Hungary's Bardos Directs at C. U.

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT THE TOWN: Catholic University has its second of overseas guest directors for its initial offering of the season, "Romeo and Juliet," opening November 4 . . . This gentleman is Dr. Arthur Bardos, until recently manager of Budapest's municipal theater and professor of drama at the University of Budapest . . . Dr. Bardos has had an exceptionally lively career in his native land, where they call him "The Hungarian Reinhardt" . . . Originally a mere critic, Dr. Bardos went to Berlin in the Reinhardt days and between the wars his productions of Shaw, Strindberg, Rolland, Molnar and Zilahy brought a continent's respect for the small, elegant Belvarosi . . . A painstaking technician though confronted by a language barrier, Dr. Bardos' direction of the greatest love story in the English tongue is bound to be production of stimulating interest . . . A unique tribute was paid him by Variety on his twenty-fifth anniversary as a stage director, detailing at length his version of "Lysistrata," for which all the artists of Middle Europe he had encouraged and aided to maturity were the performers . . . It's a long way from Budapest to Catholic University, Washington, but Dr. Bardos' version of "Romeo and Juliet" is one more proof that the world indeed is getting smaller . . . Dr. Bardos must meet our Mrs. Thayer, whose knowledge of his homeland will delight the visitor.

THE CAPITOL Theater is readying for one of those celebrity-studded previews which should attract the most glittering Washington audience of 1949 . . . This will be for the first showing of "Battleground," Metro's production about the Battle of Bastogne and men of the 101st Airborne Division . . . Production Chief Dore Schary will be on from the Coast for the night of Wednesday, November 9, and on the previous day will talk to the Women's National Press Club about the movies; George Murphy, who's costarred with Van Johnson, John Hodiak, Ricardo Montalban and Marshall Thompson, will be along with Schary, and the Capitol's invitation list assures a creamy, goldbraid audience to greet this picture, climax of Metro's twenty-fifth anniversary season.

MADELEINE CARROLL'S over in Baltimore this week—Ford's—and sends greetings to her many Washington pals . . . The lovely, gracious Madeleine's mindful of her repute as one of the world's "best dressed." . . . In Paris this summer she took time out from holiday to have a new set of gowns designed for her second season in "Goodbye, My Fancy," giving the comedy's Congress—woman heroine a 1949 Parisian wardrobe designed by Pierre Balmain.

THE NATIONAL'S getting ready to say goodbye to "Devil in the Flesh." . . . The French film's sixth and final week begins today with a new, ambitious Metro film set to folow on November 1, "The Red Danube." . . . Walter Pidgeon, Peter Lawford, Ethel Barrymore Janet Leigh and Angela Lansbury are the stars of this one, which, by the way, will beat Lawford's personal appearance on the Capitol stage by only a few days.

CANADA LEE will be in town tomorrow to make two personal appearances at the Dupont during the first showings of "Lost Boundaries," in which he has a role . . . Throughout the "Lost Boundaries" run the Dupont will have its first showings at 11 a. m., instead of its usual afternoon openings . . . Lee, who plays a helpful police lieutenant in the picture, will meet his audiences at 5:30 and 9:40 p. m.

THE AGRICULTURE PLAYERS are readying "The Public Bosom" for a mid-December showing and some of the 25 roles remain to be filled . . . This is the play about Governmena life by George Garrott and George Copland, both former reporters of the New York Times and now with the State Department . . . Zelda Fichandler of George Washington University is directing the play and Mike Curry is supervising his own settings . . . If you're interested in trying out for one of the remaining suporting roles, write about yourself to Charles H. Cunningham, Employe Activities Director, Welfare Association, Room 1073-S, Agriculture Dept., Washington 25.

Mrs. Madsen Told of Insult, Witness Says

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Yvette Madsen, shock-stricken mother of two, was quoted by a witness today as saying she killed her U. S. Air Force husband because "Andy laughed" when another woman insulted her at a party.

Mrs. Madsen was held for trial under German law on a charge equivalent to the first degree murder of Lieut. Andrew E. Madsen of Oakland, Calif.

The beautiful 22-year-old Brooklyn, N. Y., woman sat in an apparent daze. Her eyes were closed and tears streamed down her cheeks as she sat trembling.

Mrs. Marie Hinman of St. Louis, Mo., a neighbor of the Madsens, said she was awakened at 3 a. m. by Mrs. Madsen.

One Dead, 31 Hurt In Crash of Bus And Trailer Truck

Paoli, Pa., Oct. 24 (AP).—The crash of a Greyhound bus and a tractor trailer loaded with 33,000 pounds of sheet steel today killed a young sailor and injured 31 other persons.

Several injured persons were pinned in their seats as the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia bus crashed into the truck, on the Lincoln Highway here, 30 miles west of Philadelphia. Most of those hurt were able to go home after treatment on the scene or at hospitals.

The dead youth, Stephen H. Chapley, jr., 18, was returning to the cruiser Roanoke at the Philadelphia Naval Base after visiting his home in Uniontown, Pa.

5 Amtorg Officials Are Released in $15,000 Cash Bail

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Five officials of the Soviet trade organization Amtorg were released in $15,000 cash bail each today, after spending a weekend behind bars.

The five, arrested last Friday on charges of failure to register as foreign agents, were indicted, along with a sixth official who is believed to have returned to Russia, by a Federal grand jury in Washington.

The Government will move this week to have the men taken to Washington for trial. They are Aleksei Vasilievich, president of Amtorg, and Vassili P. Rebrov, Sergei A. Shevchenko, Aleksander A. Istchenko, and Gennadi N. Ogloblin.

They were released after Isadore G. Needleman, counsel for Amtorg, deposited with the U. S. District Court clerk five $10,000 bills and five $5000 bills. Amtorg has been accused of acting as a cover for Russian espionage and propaganda activities.

2 Children Perish In Wilmington Fire

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 24 (AP).—Two sisters, Francine, 3, and Jacqueline, 6, died early today in a fire that swept a two-family house in suburban Elsmere. Their mother, Mrs. Veronica Wivel, climbed out of a second floor window, grasping another child, 8-months-old Gregory in her arms.

She dropped Gregory into the arms of a neighbor then she leaped to the limb of a tree and, as the limb broke, fell to the ground. She was not hurt seriously.

Arlington Carpenter Cleared of Rape Charge

William A. Martin, Arlington carpenter, 21, 817 North 22d st. was acquitted yesterday in Fairfax County Circuit Court of a charge he raped a 54-year-old woman last May in her cottage near Lorton, Va.

Martin pleaded innocent, and was cleared by Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown. Testimony showed the woman did not report the alleged offense for several days after she said it occurred.

Love Affairs Ruled No Bar To Citizenship

New York, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—The fact that an unmarried German-born college professor had sexual intercourse with unmarried women has no bearing on his right to citizenship, a U. S. Court of Appeals ruled today.

The decision revised the Immigration and Naturalization Service which had refused second papers to Adolf Schmidt, 44, after he admitted he "now and then" had intercourse with unmarried women.

Chief Judge Learned Hand said Schmidt, French and German professor at the City College of New York, seems "in every way qualified as a citizen except that, in a moment of what may have been unnecessary frankness," he admitted having intercourse in the United States.

But the law on the subject, Hand said, "is not free from doubt."

Schmidt was forced to resign from the faculty of Colby Junior College at New London, N. H., because he had a venereal disease, naturalization authorities said.

Judges Thomas W. Swan and Charles B. Clark concurred with Hand, who said such sexual habits of men such as Schmidt are "far from uncommon."

"We have answered in the negative the question whether an unmarried man must live completely celibate or forfeit his claim to a 'good moral character'", Hand said.

Color Television 2 to 3 Years Off, FCC is Told

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday heard an estimate that it would take two to three years to get color television broadcasting into general use.

Donald K. Lippincott, San Francisco patent attorney and engineering consultant to Color Television, Inc., of that city, gave the estimate at FCC's color hearings in response to questions.

Lippincott emphasized the time required to "get equipment out of the laboratory and into the field." He asserted that if FCC decides the time is ripe for color and selects the system to be used, there would be "experimental broadcasting" almost at once, but that general commercial programming would take "two to three years" to develop.

57 Head of Cattle Sell for $46,915 In Warrenton

Warrenton, Va., October 24.—Fifty-seven head of Aberdeen Angus cattle, including four bulls, sold for $46,915 here today. The auction was the twenfth annual show and sale of the Virginia Aberdeen Angus Breeders Association.

L. W. Turner, owner of Old Elkton Farms, Forest, Va., sold a cow, Black Cap Thornton O. E., which had been adjudged champion of the show, to Milton E. Westcott of Elysian Farms, Haymarket, Va., for $3600. Highest price of the sale also was paid by Westcott, $3700 for a cow sold by Highland Farms, Round Hill, Va.

Approximately 300 persons attended the sale. The average price of the cattle sold, $823, was below that of last year, $1092.

Jet Pilot Bakes At 170 Degrees as Heat Device Stalls

London, Oct. 24 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Patrick D. Fleming's United States Air Force F-84 jet fighter gave him a hot ride over the Atlantic.

The cockpit heat control stuck after his takeoff from Iceland. For more than an hour Fleming baked at 170 degrees. Air Force officials said he was completely dehydrated when he landed at Prestwick, Scotland, yesterday.

Fleming, 30, of New York City, and Col. David C. Schilling, 30, Traverse City, Mich., flew the first two F-84 jet fighters to make the Atlantic hop.

They took off from Prestwick today for Tangmere, an RAF base on England's south coast.

Laborer Confesses Ax Slaying of Widow

Sturgis, Mich., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—A laborer who previously had been cleared by lie detector tests confessed today that he struck a 75-year-old widow with an ax and burned her, police announced.

Aaron Clark, 33, who formerly lived in the home of the late Mrs. Laurah Miller, admitted he wrapped her in kerosene-soaked blankets after the ax attack and set the mafire, officers said.

Foreign Ships Sail Into Norfolk With Potatoes, Turnips

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Three ships, flying foreign flags, brought 100,000 bags of potatoes and 5000 bags of turnips here over the weekend. They will be stored until withdrawn under bond to be shipped to various parts of the country mostly South and Southwest. The potatoes are mostly for seeding purposes.

The duty is 7 cents a pound on potatoes and turnips and the local custom authorities will collect approximately $100,000. The potatoes were loaded at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island and St. John, Newfoundland.

Death Toll Put At 32 in New Colombia Riots

Cali, Colombia, Oct. 24 (U.P.). New killings and riots connected with the political unrest in Colombia were reported today.

The number of deaths in political clashes over the weekend was said to be at least 32.

Provincial Gov. Nicolas Borrero blamed the rioting on "Godless, lawless men" seeking to clamp a "leftist dictatorship" on Colombia.

Mrs. Truman Has Cold.

President Truman reported yesterday that Mrs. Truman is suffering from a cold.

That, he explained, is the reason she did not accompany him to New York for cornerstone cerebuilding.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 24 (AP).—All oats contracts moved to new seasonal highs on the Board of Trade today, feaaturing a generally firm market.

Action on oats represented a continuation of the strength this grain showed all week. Commission houses reported a broader outside interest in the grain. Buying has been based on light receipts of cash oats, coupled with a firm market for the supplies which have arrived.

While the market generally was firm, there were a couple of laggards. The nearby rye future gave up a little ground on reports that two stamers were coming were with 654,000 bushels of Canadian rye. Deferred soybeans eased slightly on liquidation by bulls.

Wheat ended 1⅛ to 1¾ higher, corn was ¾ to 1¼ higher, oats were 1¼ to 1⅝ higher, corn was ⅜ to 1¼ higher, oats were 1¼ to 1⅞ higher, rye was ½ lower to 1 cent higher, soybeans were ½ lower to 1¼ higher, and lard was 8 to 27 cents a hundred pounds higher.

SUSIE Q. SMITH

"Happy birthday, Susie, dear"

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK,—Ference Molnar, now an American citizen, wanted to register to vote in the November elections. Because he is a first voter, the renowned Molnar whose professional career began 53 years ago and established him as one of the world's foremost men of letters, was told that he'd have to take a literacy test . . . Although the Hungarian-born playwright has mastered the English language, he still hesitates to meet people because he fears he may become flustered in the new tongue. "It is my profession to say the right words, and with proper grammatical construction," he confides. "And if one right word doesn't come to me, in conversation, I find another proper one, even though it doesn't express my real sentiments. I change my mind, and sacrifice political opinion, in the middle of a sentence—in favor of good grammar."

American Overseas Airlines, which recently brought a group of editors from the Marshall Plan countries to tour the principal American cities, is extending similar invitations to editors in countries behind the iron curtain. The refusals are being collected now . . . The Marquess of Milford-Haven, who has just been named to the list of world's best-dressed men, was in Toots Shor's one day wearing a tie purchased in a New York haberdashery shop by his father 25 years ago . . . Capt. Harry Sperber, who translated the Justice Jackson-Herman Goering exchange at the Nurenburg trial, now is translating the mashnotes sent to Severino Rigoni, the Italian 6-day bike racer at the 168th St. Armory.

When Saving's Not a Virtue

Most of us think of saving and thrift as unquestionable virtues. "A penny saved is a penny earned" is only one of the many maxims expressing that conviction. But is the saving attitude always a virtue?

Bill McGinnis is a nice youngster. Lately, though, his friends have begun to avoid him. They've found that whenever he's out with the "gang," he tends to hang back and let someone else "stand the treat." If the bunch is planning a good time, his first question is always, "How much will it cost?"

Through the years Bill's parents have stressed the importance of money. There is a good deal of talk around home about being careful with what one has. Those who spend money even moderately are rather looked down on.

There's no doubt, of course, that a thrifty attitude has its values. But if it goes to the extreme that it has with Bill, more imporant things are jeopardized. The person who is overly cautious about money is looked upon as stingy and greedy. Others don't find him a very pleasant companion. Such emphasis, too, is likely to make the individual begin to feel that money is the all-important value and that everything else is of little worth.

Thriftiness is sometimes not a virtue but a vice.

BULL

Q. A rancher agreed to sell a certain bull to a breeder, the date of the sale to be September 1, which was three months away. July 15 the rancher sold the bull to a neighbor. The breeder learned August 1 of the sale, and promptly brought suit against the rancher for breach of contract. Is the suit maintainable?

A. When he found that the bull had been sold to another party, the breeder could (1) sue for breach of contract (2) assume that the rancher somehow was going to regain the bull for delivery by September 1, thus keeping the contract alive; or (3) recognize the contract as rescinded and do nothing about it. Thus, he is entitled to bring suit for breach, as soon as he learns of the sale to another person. However, on principle it appears that if the rancher could prove that he had an agreement with the third party for resale of the bull to the rancher before September 1, it would be a good defense to the breeder's suit. . . . Reader Explains Griff's Selection of Harris

Albert M. Rothschild of 3191 N. 17th st., Arlington, Va., notes that Clark Griffith originally announced that he wanted a playing manager, and then hired Bucky Harris. Muses District Liner Rothschild:

"He must have meant a pinochle-playing manager."

AS I WAS SAYING—

Thanks to those of you who have kept me laughing by sending in the humorous typographical errors you encounter in the public prints. I wish I could use them.

But as announced here back on September 21, our Pied Type Dept. has gone out of business. It was taking up too much of our limited space. So there was only one solution.

Instead of letting my Frankenstein destroy me, I strangled him with my own two shrdlu etaoins.

OUCH!

Cass John Dryer of 1041 Barnaby ter. se. was on a streetcar the other day, seated directly behind a neatly dressed young lady who had an unusually large and protruding nose.

When a little boy on the next seat looked her way, the lady smiled pleasantly, whereupon the lad shrilled for all to hear:

"Lady, are you Jimmy Durante's mother?"

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Why all the complaints about "speed traps"? People who obey the law don't have to worry about traps; and those who break the law and get caught ought to take their medicine without squawking.

G. R. Cooley,

Dear Mr. Cooley:

These are not squawks from people who have been caught. I haven't been charged with speeding, and neither have a great majority of Washington's other motorists.

Our beef is that we don't believe in entrapment. Policemen are supposed to patrol their beats, and by their very presence remind us of our laws, and of the necessity for obeying them.

A policeman who hides behind a billboard, inviting motorists to speed and get caught, is not discharging his primary duty. He's laying a trap.

That technique not only outrages our American sense of fair play, but fails to accomplish any worthwhile purpose.

Modern police departments (including our own) are therefore sold on the importance of preventing crime, rather than exacting a pound of flesh from the criminal after the damage has been done.

Penalties are a poor substitute for prevention. Enlightened enforcement methods resort to penalties only when all else has failed.

It's like spanking a child for getting into the jam you temptingly left within his reach. The only thing you teach the kid is that, next time, he must make sure you're not lurking in the offing, ready to pounce on him.

Bill.

ADD CLUB NEWS

THE JOHNS HOPKINS INFLUENCE, NO DOUBT

Mrs. J. B. Aiken of 4622 Morgan dr., Chevy Chase, Md., is amused by the postage meter imprint used by the Baltimore office of the telephone company. It reads, "Baltimore, M. D." Pondering the extra period, Mrs. Aiken muses:

"It sounds so medical."

HE'S OVERDOING IT

M. O. Coleman of 520 7th st. se. has a nomination for Capital Transit's "Glad to Have You Aboard Club."

District Liner Coleman thinks that a membership card should be issued forthwith to the operator who, despite persistent ringing, failed to let passengers get off his car at four different stops between 7th st. nw. and 7th st. se.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Was there ever a checkroom girl who left any coin smaller than a quarter in her plate as a decoy?

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va.:

The passenger car ahead of us was standing still when the Virginia bus in which we were riding rammed into its rear end.

I thought the driver would be furious. Instead, he chatted good-naturedly about the accident with the bus operator, and didn't seem the least bit annoyed. Not even when his rear bumper fell off as the two vehicles were being separated.

I marveled at the man's composure and, as I waited to alight from the bus as we neared my stop, I couldn't help but remark about it to the bus driver. His answer floored me.

"Why shouldn't he have been good-natured about it?" he snapped. "He was driving my car."

Merry-Go-Round

And Barkley Blushed

By Drew Pearson

Still coy about his St. Louis romance, Vice President Barkley blushingly admitted to the Senate before adjourning that he "may" spend some time in Missouri instead of heading right back to Kentucky.

Barkley

The question was brought up by Missouri's usually humorless Senator Forrest Donnell after a fellow Republican, Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, assured that the Vice President would be welcome in his State any time — even if he is a Democrat.

With a twinkle in his eye, Donnell broke in: "I should like to invite the Vice President most graciously to visit Missouri occasionally."

"The present occupant of the chair appreciates that invitation, and in view of its sincerity, the chair may accept it," smiled Barkley.

"I will say to the Vice President that I was quite confident that he would, when I extended the invitation," replied Donnell.

"The chair would like to state," replied the Vice President, "that if he does accept the invitation, it will not be in his capacity as Vice President of the United States."

Then he blushed—just a bit.

John L. Lewis' Chickens

The public has forgotten it and the J. P. Morgan-Andrew Mellon interests would like to forget it, but they have themselves largely to blame for the Nation's now serious coal and steel strikes.

The incident they would like to forget goes back to the summer of 1947 when John L. Lewis sat down with the biggest coal operators in the country and was both surprised and pleased when they gave him a 45-cents-an-hour wage increase, plus welfare fund, plus almost everything else he asked for even including some nullifications of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The companies which led in handing Lewis this bonanza were J. P. Morgan's U. S. Steel Corp. which owns the biggest captive coal mines in the U. S. A., and the Mellon-controlled Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co.

This gift to Lewis came as a shock to the rest of the industry because only six months before, President Truman had thrown everything he had into a court battle against Lewis and won. Most of the Nation had applauded. Futhermore, only one year earlier, the coal operators had bitterly criticized Secretary of the Interior Krug because he gave Lewis an increase of 18½ cents—exactly the same given in other industries.

Yet, on top of this, Ben Fairless of U. S. Steel and George Humphrey of Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal handed Lewis 45 cents an hour extra plus welfare fund, etc. Furthermore, the workers didn't have to contribute to the welfare fund. It all came from the employer.

The hidden motives for this sudden surrender, it was reported at the time, were (1) That Lewis in return would line up labor for Tom Dewey and against Truman; and (2) The steel industry was able to pass the increased cost on to the consumer. In brief, Truman had kicked Lewis in the teeth; now powerful Republicans wanted to show how they could stroke his mane.

But the effect of this bonanza to Lewis still is reverberating through the auto industry, the aluminum industry, and the banked furnaces of the steel industry. The Mellons' aluminum corporation would not be shut by a strike today, had not their Pittsburgh Consolidation played politics with Lewis two years ago. Nor would General Motors and Chrysler be up against tough pension demands today.

For their gift to Lewis set a pattern which every other labor leader had to duplicate, and now this makes it impossible for Murray to take anything less from U. S. Steel than Lewis got from U. S. Steel.

Gen. Bradley Flares

It's nothing new for a congressional committee to call the brass hats on the carpet, but it is new for a brass hat to call Senators on the carpet. The man who reversed this rule is Gen. Omar Bradley, the Nation's top military commander, who scorched the Senate Appropriations Committee for leaking secret information to the press.

The Senators had given out figures from a secret intelligence report which Bradley had quoted to the Senate committee behind closed doors—namely, that Russia has 175 divisions under arms and can boost this to 300 divisions within 90 days and to an eventual strength of 502 divisions. This compares with a peak Allied strength of 91 divisions during the war.
